ROOSEVELT VISITS GREAT ASSOUAN DAM

SEES EGYPTIAN MUMMIES

Makes Formal Statement at Shellal that Politics Must Be Barred in Reception in New York.

By JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN,
Former Assistant Secretary of State,

Copyright, 1910, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

SHELLAL, Egypt, March 20.—Under Government auspices Col. Roosevelt's party visited Philae to-day, going in the Government launch to the historic island which was submerged as a result of the construction of the Assouan Dam. He took a boat that was towed through the great colonnades of the Temple of Isis, with thirty-two columns, and manifested an especial interest in the beautiful colorings and settings.

From the temple he was taken over the Assouan Dam, which is a magnificent piece of masonry, though smaller than the Gatun Dam at Panama. He returned to the Assouan Hotel for luncheon, and afterward visited the tombs excavated by Gen. Grenfell, containing the mummies of Egyptian Princes of 3,000 years ago. Col. Roosevelt was interested in the tombs, which presented pictures of the domestic life of those days, showing a King fishing with a two-pronged spear and watching donkeys entering a town.

He returned in the launch to Shellal, expatiating on the exquisite beauty of Philae in the twilight with the long shadows cast by the columns and rocky hills in the rose lights of the evening.

The Nile trip from Wadi Halfa to Shellal was ideal. Only one stop was made in the thirty-four hours' journey, at Abu Simbel, which is the finest rock temple in the world, not excepting those in India. The Roosevelt family landed and saw the four colossal figures of Rameses the Great, sitting in serene majesty overlooking the Nile Valley.

They were impressed with the simplicity, grandeur, and beauty of the scene. Ethel, the reader of the party, quoted Baedeker's explanation of the symbols hewn in the walls, describing the victories over Khetas. Col. Roosevelt met an Egyptologist and discussed at length the reign of Rameses, showing a surprising knowledge of the conditions of that period.

Condemns Acts of Vandals.

He condemned sharply the vandals who had cut their names on the breasts and arms of the figures, saying the Government should treat them as they would be treated in America in connection with such acts in Yellowstone Park, where guilty vandals are compelled to return at their own expense and erase the work. If one or two such miscreants were brought back from Cairo, the Colonel expressed the conviction that vandalism would end.

The scenery, although interesting occasionally, was for the most part monotonous. Sometimes barren rocks and sands ran down to the water's edge without a sign of vegetation, and sometimes we passed through ranges of lifeless hills, becoming purple toward the sunset. Then would come the blessed relief of graceful palms and stretches of green banks, where creaking water wheels hauled life-giving water from the river to the thirsting earth.

We passed a few villages whose almost naked inhabitants, toiling to produce the necessaries of life, stopped work to stare curiously at the passing steamer. The glorious evening was spent on deck, the stars seeming like jewels hanging pendent aloft in the sky. The desert was orange in the mellow light shed by the half moon, and the scene was engulfed in impenetrable silence, which the party broke only in whispers.

Greeted by Egyptian Government.

Arriving at Shellal, Col. Roosevelt received the greetings of the Egyptian Government. Lady Wingate, wife of the Sirdar, sent Mrs. Roosevelt a beautiful bunch of roses and African flowers, which were presented by the Egyptian Commandant, who had decorated them with a penny American flag, the only one he could obtain after a frantic search.

Col. Roosevelt was engaged early in the morning answering his mail and telegrams and seeing several missionaries and the representatives of the railroad, who had arranged a special train for him. To the former he expressed regret that he could not visit their station, explaining that engagements prevented and calling attention to the number of Presbyterian stations already visited or which he intends to visit.

Col. Roosevelt will not permit himself to be used in any way in connection with political events in America. This was demonstrated in a statement he made to-day in answer to a question in reference to the New York reception. He said:

> Naturally, I am deeply touched and pleased to learn that my fellow-countrymen feel they would like to receive me on my return to New York. I shall be more than glad to see them, but my reception must be non-partisan. It must be participated in by Republicans, Democrats, Populists, and men of other or no political faith alike—in short, by all who care to take part in such a reception, whatever their

FOUR HURT IN AUTO SMASH.

Broker's Car Hit a Tree—One Man, His Skull Fractured, May Die.

A Coney Island automobile ride landed four men in hospitals late yesterday afternoon, one with a fractured skull and other injuries, from which he is not expected to recover. So far the police have not been able to discover his identity. The owner of the machine, George De Gumeons, a cotton broker, of 138 East Eighteenth Street, Flatbush, and his other two companions, John Kemble of Ninth Avenue and Fifteenth Street and John Farrell of Twentieth Street and Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, received cuts and contusions.

De Gumeons reached Coney Island early in the day and attracted considerable attention with his high-power automobile along Surf Avenue. He made frequent stops, and invited nearly every one he met to take a ride. Kemble, who is 62 years old, and Farrell, who is 24, accepted the invitation, and about 5:30 o'clock the party started for Brooklyn. At the first stop in Sheepshead Bay they encountered the unknown man, and invited him to come along. He climbed into the front seat with De Gumeons, who was driving.

Up Neck Road they went to East Twelfth Street, where there is a sharp turn. Skirting the roadside there is a four-foot ditch, and right at the corner a large willow tree, which long has been a landmark, juts half way across the road. As De Gumeons turned the corner something went wrong with the steering gear or he became frightened and lost control of the machine. The automobile headed straight for the ditch. About four feet from the ground a thick limb of the tree spreads out, and this caught the hood of the car. It sheared off the entire top part of the car. The occupants of the car went with the hood and the seats. The four were knocked unconscious.

A block away Policeman Frank Johnson of the Sheepshead Bay Police Station heard the crash. He sent in hurry calls for ambulances to the Kings County and Coney Island Reception Hospitals. When Dr. Graham of the latter hospital reached the scene three of the men had recovered from the first shock, but the man who shared the front seat with the owner was, to all appearances, dead. At the hospital it was discovered that, besides a fractured skull, he had several broken ribs.

De Gumeons had many cuts and contusions, Kemble had a scalp wound, and Farrell had contusions of the back. They were taken to the Kings County Hospital. The car was wrecked.

LOUISIANA'S NEW RECORD.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The battleship Louisiana exceeded all her previous performances yesterday in a test of speed in Cuban waters, where the vessels of the Atlantic fleet are engaged in manoeuvres. Admiral Schroeder, in command of the fleet, in his report to the Navy Department last week, stated that a preliminary estimate showed that the Louisiana maintained an average speed of 18.942 knots an hour in a four-hour, full-power trial under forced draught. This was accomplished with about 10,000 tons greater displacement than was the case on her contractor's trial.

When the fleet entered Guantanamo Bay several weeks ago to begin the drills 4,054 men were unable to swim. As a result of the instructions which have been given in this respect, 3,226 of these have now qualified, and the lessons will be continued for all men who cannot swim fifty yards.

In a competitive match of small arms teams of various ships last week the Missouri was declared winner with the Nebraska a close second. During the stay of the fleet in Cuban waters over 5,000 men have carried out a progressive course of small arms firing, and about 10,000 have attained the qualification of marksman or sharpshooter.

The Nebraska and the New Hampshire are engaged in a series of three games for the baseball championship of the fleet. The first game was won by the Nebraska in eleven innings yesterday by a score of 4 to 3.

PROFESSOR DIGS DITCHES.

H. U. Ransom Joins Other Harvard College Men as a Subway Laborer.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mas., March 20.—The Cambridge subway, on which several college men are workers, has now another worker in H. U. Ransom, Instructor of Mathematics and Civil Engineering at the Harvard Summer School, and Assistant Professor at the university. Prof. Ransom works for $1.50 per day in company with Italians, at ditch digging. He wears the same rough clothes, khaki trousers, a slouch hat, and heavy shoes, and smokes a clay pipe while so occupied. Says Prof. Ransom:

"I am desirous of learning the contracting business from top to bottom, and realizing that theoretical training received at college would be of little use to me if not reinforced by practical knowledge, I obtained a job as a laborer.

"The work is disagreeable at times, but is the means to attain this end. I can dig with the best of them now, and Mr. Nawn tells me that as soon as they start the concrete construction he will place me in charge of a gang. My boss is pretty exacting, too, and his instructions must be obeyed and to the minute.

"I got my B. A. degree in 1906 and my M. A. last year. I hear the waiting list at the subway has the names of a lot of college men seeking vacation jobs."

Mr. Nawn, the contractor, says:

"The college boys are all right on this work, but it is rather hard on the contractor. They do not work with the speed our laborers do. Prof. Ransom is an exception. He has made good with a vengeance and will be steadily promoted. What he will not know about construction work when he leaves us he will never learn."

FIRE NEAR CROWDED HOSPITAL

Fire in the brewery of N. Sitz's Sons, at Maujer and Grange Streets, Williamsburg, yesterday caused intense excitement among 225 patients in St. Catherine's Hospital, which adjoins it. Only the coolheadedness of the Sisters of St. Dominic, the nurses, and doctors prevented a panic.

When the fire started, mass was being celebrated in the hospital chapel by the Rev. George Metzger, the hospital Chaplain, and the congregation numbered several hundred. Among them were many of the nuns, who were in the choir loft. They heard the emergency bell and, without disturbing the service, they quietly withdrew and took up their posts with the other hospital attaches.

The west side of the brewery overlooks the entire rear of the hospital. The fire started in the hop loft on the fourth floor, and was probably caused by spontaneous combustion. When an employe discovered the blaze it had spread over the entire floor and swept up to the cupola. Dense smoke enveloped the upper part of the hospital and penetrated the rooms.

The Mother Superior, Mary Margaret, rang the emergency alarm, and within two minutes, the sisters and attaches were at their posts.

In the female wards there was intense excitement when the firemen began to wet down the hospital wall to prevent the flames from reaching it. Some of the patients were removed to another part of the building.

The fire burned fiercely for more than an hour, and the police with difficulty controlled the crowd which gathered. The fire did $75,000 damage.

TAFT'S EFFORTS FAIL ON CANADIAN TARIFF

ONLY ELEVEN DAYS' MARGIN

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 20.—In an effort to avert the threatened tariff war with Canada, President Taft spent several hours to-day discussing the schedules in their bearing on trade relations between this country and the Dominion with W. S. Fielding, the Canadian Minister of Finance, and Charles M. Pepper, the tariff expert attached to the Bureau of Trade Relations in the State Department at Washington. At the close of the conferences, which took place at the Executive Mansion and extended with intervals over much of the day, the following statement was authorized by the President:

"The President and Mr. Fielding were in conference for several hours to-day in respect to the tariff in its bearing on our trade relations with Canada. No conclusion was reached, but the situation remains one of friendly negotiation."

Eleven days remain for "friendly negotiation" before the maximum rates of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law automatically go into effect against those countries which are regarded by the President as "unduly discriminating" against the United States. The law is mandatory as to its application, but the President has judicial powers in reaching a conclusion as to what constitutes "undue" discrimination.

Up to this time Canada's tariff arrangement has been regarded by the President's advisers as "unduly discriminatory," and concessions are sought from the Dominion Government to place the United States on an equal footing with France and thirteen other countries which have received preferential rates under the Canadian tariff, in order that it shall not be necessary to put into effect against Canada the 25 per cent. increase provided by the Payne-Aldrich law, leaving Canada the one important country of the world subject to this maximum rate.

President's Powers Discussed.

It is understood that the President, aided by Mr. Pepper, took up to-day the discussion of tariff and trade relations where the American Tariff Commission, which was sent to Ottawa early in this month and returned without having attained any definite result, left off. The conference to-day, it was said, was concerned chiefly with a scrutiny of schedules by the tariff experts, and a discussion of certain points of international law, involving the President's right to determine whether the treatment of this country by Canada in tariff matters would properly come under the term "undue discrimination," in which case it would be compulsory for the Chief Executive to impose on imports from Canada, beginning March 31, the maximum rate.

Both the President and the Dominion Government are anxious to arrive at a proper adjustment of the differences that now exist, if this can be done without economic sacrifices or loss of prestige.

It was not expected that a final result could be attained at the conferences to-day. The Canadian Minister of Finance did not have plenary power for one thing, and the President necessarily would be expected to submit a question of this importance to the Cabinet before committing the United States to any new policy.

The fact that Mr. Taft to-night summoned James McDonald of Toronto to the Governor's mansion and thanked him for his part in helping to bring about to-day's meeting has, however, been taken to indicate that some progress was made and that the outlook is not quite so dark as it appeared to be a few days ago.

The President was fairly inundated with telegrams again to-day from various interests throughout the country expressing the hope that an amicable agreement with Canada might be reached. Only within the last seventy-two hours, it seems, has the seriousness of the situation been appreciated in this country and in the Dominion. The President has been keenly alive to the situation, however.

In view of the short time remaining for the adjustment of the many tariff differences with Canada, Mr. Taft before leaving Washington actually consulted with his advisors as to whether or not after the maximum rates had automatically been applied it would be within the power of the Executive, by subsequent proclamation, to grant a reduction.

Views of Secretary Knox.

Secretary of State Knox, without definitely committing himself, held the opinion that a change in circumstances favorable to the United States might warrant the President in rescinding the maximum tariff, and he believed that the discretionary power vested in him by the law gave ample authority for such action.

Earl Grey, titular head of the Dominion Government, took no part in the conferences between the President and Minister Fielding. The latter, it is reported, may be in Washington before the end of the month.

The President received to-day by special messenger from the State Department a draught of the proclamation granting the minimum tariff rates to France and signed it as of yesterday.

TAFT TO PLAY GREY AT GOLF.

ALBANY, March 20.—After being for a day and a half the guest of Gov. Hughes, President Taft retired on board his private car to-night, and at 3 o'clock in the morning will leave for New York on his way to New Haven, where he will to-morrow attend a meeting of the Yale Corporation.

Earl Grey, Governor General of Canada, accompanies the President to New York as his personal guest. The two heads of Government sat up late to-night in the observation parlor of the car Olympia conversing with the frank cordiality and evident pleasure in each other's company that both have felt since their first meeting on American soil yesterday afternoon. Earl Grey was first to pay his respects to the American Chief Executive at the Governor's Mansion. The President's cards immediately afterward were left at the Earl's apartments by Capt. Butt, his military aid. The President and Earl Grey met several times to-day and were seated side by side at the informal luncheon given by Gov. Hughes.

President Taft has challenged Lord Grey to an international game of golf next Summer. The game will be played

TWO WOMEN HURT AS CAR WRECKS COACH

RETURNING FROM A PARTY

Miss Emily Edwards, sister of Julian Edwards, the musical composer, and Mrs. George H. Thomas, his niece, were seriously injured early yesterday morning when a coach in which they were riding was struck by a trolley car on the Riverdale Avenue line at Yonkers.

Miss Edwards sustained a fracture of the collarbone and two ribs, and was badly cut about the head. Her condition is critical. Mrs. Thomas, who before her marriage was Maude Hollins, an actress, received a fracture of the breast bone, and lacerations of the scalp. Though painfully injured she will recover.

Mrs. Thomas and her aunt, Miss Edwards, who live at 27 Hamilton Avenue, had attended a bridge party at the home of Mrs. Thomas's mother, Mrs. Redford Hollins, 70 Beechwood Terrace, Yonkers. When the party concluded Mrs. Thomas summoned a coach, and on the way to her home the driver, Richard Roach of 10 Palisade Avenue, went through Morris Street.

When the coach reached Riverdale Avenue a north-bound car was approaching, but Roach did not see it until it was close to him. He whipped up and succeeded in getting the horse safely across, but the coach was struck squarely, the side was crushed in, and the vehicle thrown against a telegraph pole thirty feet away.

Roach was hurled from his seat and landed on his back. He was but slightly injured. With the assistance of the motorman, John McClintock, the conductor, Ernest Welsh, and several passengers, Miss Edwards and Mrs. Thomas were extricated from the wreck. Miss Edwards was in a semi-conscious condition, while Mrs. Thomas, who did not appear to have been so badly hurt, disregarded her own injuries showing every solicitude for the condition of her aunt.

Ambulances from St. John's Hospital with Dr. William Dorfler, and from St. Joseph's Hospital, with Dr. William Klein, took the injured women to a nearby house, where they were attended by Dr. Dorfler, and then removed to their home.

McClintock, the motorman, denied that his car was going at an unusual rate of speed. He said the coach appeared suddenly, and that he saw it too late to stop. He declared that the coach was not equipped with lights. No arrests were made.

Mrs. Thomas's husband is George H. Thomas, a wealthy lumberman and builder. The couple were married nine years ago. Before her marriage Mrs. Thomas appeared in "Jolly Musketeers," "Dolly Varden," "The Wedding Day," and other compositions of Julian Edwards, her uncle.

GARFIELD BOOMS A JUDGE.

Thinks R. W. Taylor, Federal Jurist, Will Run Against Harmon in Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 20.—James R. Garfield, former Secretary of the Interior and himself prominently mentioned for the Gubernatorial nomination on the Republican ticket, predicted last night at a banquet of the Nisi Prius Club that United States Judge R. W. Taylor of Cleveland would run against Gov. Judson Harmon this Fall.

Both Gov. Harmon and Judge Taylor were at the banquet.

CINCINNATI, March 20.—An announcement is expected soon that the candidacy of Judge Robert W. Taylor of Cleveland for the Governorship would have the approval of President Taft. Some one belonging to the Ohio delegation to Congress is expected to return and tell the leaders that the President sees in this choice a satisfactory solution of the situation in Ohio. He would also have the approval of George B. Cox of this city.

Judge Taylor has told officials that he wishes to remain on the Federal bench, but it is believed that he can be persuaded to leave it.

DANCED OVER 15 HOURS.

San Francisco Police Stop Record Marathon Dance on Doctor's Advice.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 20.—Police stopped the world's championship Marathon dance here this afternoon after six of the contestants had been dancing fifteen hours and six minutes.

The old record was fourteen hours and forty-two minutes. A protest arose from the 3,000 spectators, and a riot was prevented only by the determined manner in which the officers cleared the platform. Doctors who were in attendance advised the police that further physical exertion on the part of the dancers might result fatally.

Seven couples entered the contest and five couples finished.

Probably the most remarkable feature of the performance was the fortitude of J. A. West, who is 54 years old. Although at times during the night it seemed that his struggle to continue was torturing him, he waved his seconds aside and kept it up. West's partner was a sixteen-year-old girl.

New Yorkers Believed to Have Shipped Ninety Women from Paris.

ANTWERP, March 20.—The American Consulate here is engaged in an attempt to trace two New York white slave importers who are believed to have shipped ninety women from Paris on outgoing steamers.

British and Continental ports are being watched, and the American and Canadian authorities have been notified to scrutinize closely all incoming passengers.

SIXTY IMPLICATED IN PITTSBURG GRAFT

SOUGHT AID FOR FAMILY

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 20.—More than sixty persons, members of the City Council, business men, and others, are involved in confessions of municipal corruption made by ex-Councilman John Klein, who is to be taken to Riverside Penitentiary to-morrow. On his way to that institution he will repeat in open court the statements he has made to District Attorney Blakeley, Leo Weil, counsel for the Civic Voters' League and others. There has been consternation among politicians to-day over the news of Klein's revelations, for Klein was the distributer of money in many instances of Councilmanic bribery, and he has furished damaging evidence, outside his own word, against the persons concerned.

Most of the persons named by Klein were to-day formally notified by messengers from the office of the District Attorney that they should be ready to appear in court on Tuesday and confess their part in grafting in Pittsburg Councils in the last few years. To those who will thus unburden their consciences the District Attorney will extend all courtesies and they will be permited to go free. Those who do not take advantage of the offer will be prosecuted.

It is the programme that to-morrow morning one of the Judges shall sit in special session to hear the confession of Klein that between sixty-five and eighty Councilmen and business men of Pittsburg have for years been engaged in grafting or giving graft in order to have business of the city transacted to suit the political bosses. Klein is expected to present a list of names of Councilmen to whom he swears he handed out more than $102,000 in graft in the last few years. At the same time the special Grand Jury will be in session, and by to-morrow evening it is expected that there will be between sixty and eighty indictments. Those who choose to take advantage of the offer of clemency made by District Attorney Blakeley can do so. Those who ignore it will suffer.

Fear an Attack on Klein.

All last night and to-day Klein has been locked in Room 543 at the Fort Pitt Hotel under guard of two detectives, who see that he does not use the telephone in communication with any one. He will be hurried from the hotel to court to-morrow morning, and from there down the Ohio River to the penitentiary to begin his sentence of three and a half years.

It is said by the authorities that Klein's life really is in danger, and he might have suffered bodily harm had he been set at liberty to-day. Two anonymous special delivery letters reached the Fort Pitt Hotel to-day addressed to Klein. His captors opened them and then telephoned for the police. Klein has been kept in ignorance of the letters as well as of their contents.

Refusal of the Councilmanic gang to promise $60 per month for the support of the wife and twin sons of Klein while he was in prison caused the exposure. Klein spent most of the last week urging his former friends to guarantee the money. He made the proposition for $60 per month to President Edward Jennings of the Columbia National Bank of Pittsburg, who was recently placed under arrest, charged with perjury, giving bribes, &c. Jennings refused to have anything to do with the matter. After appealing to others and getting the same answer Klein decided to "pull out the props and let the sky fall."

Another Grafter Got $30,000.

For years there has been a rumor that Councilman William Martin, who was sent to Riverside for some years for grafting, got a large sum of money "not to squeal," and Klein to-day said the story was true. The sum was $30,000, and Martin, who was released several weeks ago, has disappeared from Pittsburg, and is supposed to be living quietly in Cincinnati. Klein made this statement to-day:

"I passed the hat for Martin, and got him $30,000 for keeping a stiff upper lip, but I don't see any one now passing the hat for the little Captain.

"Why, I even made Mayor Guthrie, the author of all Martin's troubles, contribute to that silence fund. I went to Mr. Guthrie and gave him a hard talk, saying that he was responsible for all Billy's hard luck, and that in going to the pen he would leave behind a wife and some children that should not be made to suffer this way, and the game old, blue-stockinged Mayor of Pittsburg just dug in his pocket for a nice $50 bill for the fund. Of course, he didn't know that he was paying part of the price of Martin's silence, but he was."

Klein appears to have provided for such an emergency as he is now facing. When he was made official collector and disbursing agent of one branch of Councils he kept a regular set of books showing when and how much money was paid out to each Councilman. This book has been turned over to the District Attorney, as well as more than 100 registry receipts for letters which, he declares, contained money. Klein paid most of the Councilmen by mail, and he has the cards to show that the letters were received.

It is reported to-night that ten Councilmen are missing, having left Pittsburg late Saturday afternoon, after they had learned that Klein had told all.

Brotherhood's Assessment Enjoined.

TRENTON, N. J., March 20.—Vice Chancellor Walker in the suit of Hamlet Poole of this city has granted a preliminary injunction restraining the Supreme Circle, Brotherhood of America, from increasing its assessment rates. Mr. Poole is acting for practically all of the members of the order in New Jersey who are opposed to the increase in assessment rates made last December.

LABOR BOYCOTT ON BANKS.

Chicago Federation Favors Withdrawal of Funds by All Unions.

CHICAGO, March 20.—The Chicago Federation of Labor went on record to-day as favoring the withdrawal of all funds of organized labor on deposit in the banks of the country. Resolutions to this effect were ordered sent for action by the American Federation of Labor, the Executive Council of which is to meet in Washington on Wednesday.

The purpose of such a move, it was said, would be to bring pressure to bear on the street railway officials of Philadelphia to induce them to settle the strike in that city.

BALLOONIST FALLS 300 FEET.

Little Hurt, Though Exploded Gas Bag Falls on Top of Him.

LOS ANGELES, March 20.—Henry Savage, an aeronaut, narrowly escaped death to-day when his balloon exploded and he fell 300 feet. The balloon burst before Savage cut loose his parachute, and his body started down like a shot.

In descending, however, the parachute opened and checked the fall. Then the empty gas bag enveloped both parachute and man and dashed them to the street. Savage was unconscious when picked up, but recovered in a few minutes.

J. G. BENNETT NOT DROWNED.

Paris Rumor Was That His Yacht Had Been Lost in Red Sea.

PARIS, March 20.—Rumors were current on the boulevards this evening that James Gordon Bennett's yacht Lysistrata had been wrecked in the Red Sea and that Mr. Bennett had been drowned.

At the office of the Paris edition of The New York Herald these rumors were ridiculed, and it was stated that a cablegram had been received from Mr. Bennett at Colombo earlier in the evening, saying that all was well.

CHINESE PRINCE COMING.

Brother of Regent to Study American Military System.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—His Imperial Highness, Prince Tsai-Tao, brother of the Prince Regent of China, is on his way to the United States to study the American military system.

In an official letter received at the State Department it is announced that the Prince will reach Honolulu on April 16 and San Francisco in the latter part of April. It is said that his stay in the United States will be short. He will be accompanied by a large retinue of attaches and servants.

SOLDIERS FIRE ON MOB.

One Killed and Several Wounded in Guadeloupe Strike Riot.

POINTE-A-PITRE, Guadeloupe, March 20.—Following the arrest of several sugar plantation strikers who were accused of having pillaged the Blanchet factory at Les Mineurs, a mob gathered before the police station at that place to protest against the action of the gendarmes.

A gendarme was attacked by the mob, whereupon the soldiers fired upon the rioters, killing one and wounding several. Order has been re-established.

ORLEANS ISSUES MANIFESTO.

Thinks Liquidation Scandals May Pave Way to French Throne.

PARIS, March 20.—The Duke of Orleans, in a manifesto to the Royalists of France, apropos of the scandal arising from the liquidation of the property of religious orders, declares that republican institutions are responsible for the corruption of man.

The Duke announces that he is ready to come to Paris the minute there is a real chance of overturning the present rule, and he concludes his statement by saying:

MARINES SAVE TWO CUBANS.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 20.—Beaufort E. Kirwan, hospital apprentice at the United States Naval Hospital here, and Peter Foy, a private of marines, and aided by members of the marine guard, saved from drowning this afternoon Francisco Zayas, son of the Vice President of the Republic of Cuba, and a companion named Manuel Marcer, both students at St. John's College. The young men were in a canoe, which overturned about eighty yards from shore.

Marcer held on to the craft, but Zayas, who weighs over 200 pounds, was not able to secure a hold and was barely able to keep above water. He was just at the end of his strength when Kirwan and Foy jumped in and swam to his assistance. Kirwan secured a hold by the hair and kept Zayas's head above water until a boat could be brought. Oars could not be obtained at once, and the marines who manned the boat used planks in rowing it out to the struggling men.

DITMAS MANSION ROBBED.

Century Old Furniture Taken from a Historic Home in Flatbush.

Ditmas Mansion at 1,190 Flatbush Avenue, home of the Misses Carrie and Lillian Ditmas and one of the show places of Flatbush, was entered by thieves last week and heirlooms valued at about $200 were stolen.

On Jan. 1 the Misses Ditmas closed their Flatbush home for the Winter and went to live at the Hotel St. George. They put most of the family silver in storage, but left many heirlooms, including pictures, furniture, and bric-a-brac which had been in the Ditmas family for generations.

Abraham Ditmas, father of the Misses Ditmas, died about a year ago. He was a collector of old pictures and also took pride in preserving the household goods which had descended from his ancestors, who were among the early Dutch settlers. Among the heirlooms were several antique chairs which had been in the Ditmas family for a century or more. Several of these were carried off by the thieves.

The robbery was not discovered until last Saturday, when the Misses Ditmas visited their home. They found several bundles of bric-a-brac tied up, ready to be taken away. They believe that the thieves had paid several visits to the house.

Want No Places on New House Rules Committee—Power Might Prove Disastrous.

CANNON LASHES HIS FOES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—After the tremendous battle of the last three days both sides in the House seem inclined to mark time for the present, and see how things are drifting. It is realized that under the Norris resolution they have ten days before the serious work of electing the new Rules Committee must receive attention, and indications to-night are that the ten days will have nearly elapsed before the party caucuses are held.

"It's Sunday," said Champ Clark, the Democratic leader, when asked to-day what he was doing about the situation, and that seems to be sufficient explanation in most quarters for the present truce. Speaker Cannon himself passed the day as if nothing had happened, and this evening chatted at home with his personal friends and members of his family. He went to the Foundry Methodist Church this morning, and heard the farewell address of his favorite pastor, Dr. Robert N. Moore, who has accepted a call to Brooklyn; took a drive this afternoon, and had Dr. Moore, his wife, and a few friends to dinner this evening. It was said that no political conferences took place at the Speaker's house.

Insurgents to Avoid Power.

The one phase of the situation that seems to stand out clearly to-day is that the insurgents are about satisfied with their victory, and will not try to force things to an extreme. This moderate attitude on their part, at least on the part of a majority of them, goes even so far that they say to-night that they have no intention of trying to force into the new Committee on Rules any man of straight-out insurgent color. The regulars and the Democrats think that the insurgents will rest content with what they have won, and in all quarters where the personnel of the new committee is under discussion it is assumed that it will include none of the progressives.

The truth is that the insurgents realize that they are a small minority in the total membership of their own party, much less of the House. They know that the victory they have wrested from the Speaker was won only with the aid of Democratic votes. What makes them hesitate to assume a strategic position from which they might dominate the new committee as for the last three days they have dominated the House, is just the fear that at every crisis the question would be put squarely up to them again to ally themselves with the Democrats for the defeat of their own party's plans.

The responsibility such a position would entail upon the small body of insurgents, and still more, the responsibility it would mean for the two insurgents they might choose to hold the balance of power in the new committee is one they are loath to assume. They have won a telling victory against the power of the Speaker, and they know they have justified themselves in the eyes of the country and in the estimation of their constituents. They do not wish to put themselves in any position where they could be held responsible for the whole legislative work of the House.

Moderates May Be Chosen.

The most, then, that the insurgents tonight feel like doing in the way of clinching their gains is to strive for the election to the committee of men who, while affiliated with the regulars, are yet interested in progressive legislation. Such men are scattered through the Republican membership in the House. In the Middle Western or Pacific States not generally considered radical or insurgent such men probably constitute a majority of the Republican delegations in Congress. The insurgents feel that they would see to it that legislation of a progressive sort received favorable consideration and a fair chance before the House. Now that the bitter personal struggle against the Speaker's power seems to have run its course to a definite conclusion, they realize that after all the end of all revision of the rules is to insure fair treatment for fair legislation.

Even the regulars who have in public bitterly denounced the insurgents as seekers after newspaper fame concede that they will in the present state of the fight assume the reasonable course indicated above, and on that assumption formal talk is indulged in to-night looking to the choice of six regular Republicans for the mapority side of the committee. The other four members will, of course, be Democratic.

Names on Tentative Slates.

The slate as suggested tentatively tonight includes on the Republican side John Dalzell, probably Chairman, and Mr. Smith of Ohio, who are members of the present committee: Mr. Olmsted of Pennsylvania, Mr. Ellis of Oregon, a regular, but considered more or less favorable to the Roosevelt policies; perhaps Mr. McCall of Massachusetts, who is generally considered a fair-minded man and open to conviction when new legislation is to be considered, and Mr. Gardner of Massachusetts, a moderate insurgent.

The tentative slate for the Democrats is Champ Clark, the minority leader; Mr. Fitzgerald of Brooklyn, who is at present a minority member of the committee; Mr. Underwood of Alabama, Mr. Clark's active lieutenant on the floor and probably the most level-headed of the Democrats, and Mr. Sherley of Kentucky, a young man who has already made mark enough in the House to have his name mentioned as a candidate for the Vice Presidency.

The man against whom insurgent opposition is most likely to develop in the caucus is Mr. Dalzell. He is a Cannon lieutenant of the strongest type. He has always personified the views entertained by the Speaker, and has been the man to move the "previous question" upon every special order brought in by the Committee on Rules. The regulars, however, have let it be known that they will stand out for Mr. Dalzell's retention as a member of the committee, and in all probability he will be made Chairman.

The regulars also will insist upon the retention of Representative Smith of Iowa. Judge Smith will have a hard fight on in his district. His friends figure that to remove him at this stage would in a measure discredit him before his constituency, and might encompass his defeat. Almost any regular who might be mentioned for a place on the committee would be willing to step aside for the Iowan.

Fitzgerald May Be Opposed.

There is just a rumor here to-night that the Democratic caucus may look into the case of Representative Fitzgerald of New York. An element in the Democratic ranks is still displeased with the manner in which Mr. Fitzgerald broke into the rules fight last March, and by the introduction of his "calendar Wednesday" substitute possibly prevented the Democrats and insurgents from scoring a victory somewhat similar to that won yesterday. Mr. Fitzgerald and those Democrats who disagreed with the majority of the minority last March, however, stood firm with the solid Democracy yesterday, and this may be sufficient to appease the formerly discontented ones. In that event the Democratic members of the Rules Committee, according to merely tentative plans to-night, will be Messrs. Clark, Fitzgerald, Underwood, and Sherley.

If representation is demanded by the insurgents many Democrats believe that the man chosen will be one who is an insurgent to a degree, but not so radical as one of the nine who voted against the retention in office of Speaker Cannon. Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, who voted for a revision of the rules, but stood pat by the party on the Cannon vote, and who stands pat on the tariff and other Republican issues, is the man picked as the insurgent member of the committee, if, indeed, there is one.

Representative McCall, who may get one of the places, said to-night that he believed the six Republicans would be true and tried regulars.

"I believe the party will get together and elect six men who stand for straight party principles," said Mr. McCall.

Champ Clark said that the plans of the Democracy as to possible caucus actions are not even in formative state to-night. Mr. Clark's attitude is that there has been sufficient excitement for the last few days to justify a one day's truce. He said that the minority would proceed without haste in its selections, and that it was the present intention to elect men who would be entirely acceptable to the entire minority membership. It is possible that the Democratic caucus will be held Wednesday night, although there is a disposition on the part of some to delay action until the Republicans have shown their hand.

Expects Power to Be Centered.

A House regular, and one of the best parliamentarians of that body, talked frankly and confidently to-day of the probable effect of the Norris resolution increasing the Committee on Rules and removing the Speaker therefrom. The future will develop, he declared, one of two things—the Speaker will either regain a part of the power wrested from him or it all will drift toward the Chairman of the new committee, the Speaker gradually becoming nothing more than a presiding officer. In this event, he predicted, the next big fight in the House, which might be delayed for several years, would be against the Chairman of the Rules Committee and not against the Speaker.

"The consequence is that within a short time there will be a concentration of power in the Chairman of the Rules Committee, or again in the Speaker," he continued. "No one has been able yet to devise a plan whereby 391 men with 30,000 bills can call up individually certain measures for consideration. There the trouble lies. In State Legislatures and in the Senate, with its limited membership, it is expedient for a member to move to discharge a certain committee from the consideration of a bill and to bring that bill before the house. You cannot delegate, without bringing chaos, such a right to the members of a body which comprises nearly 400 men from all sections of the country.

"Here is the thing that has brought about the present dissatisfaction: The Speaker has had the appointive power as concerns all committees. A committee might get a bill and delay report on it. There was no way by which the member interested in that measure could move to discharge the offending committee unless the Committee on Rules allowed him that privilege, and the Speaker, the same man who named the offending committee, was Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

"Under the Norris resolution much will now depend upon who is made Chairman of the Committee on Rules. It is to be presumed that the majority party will consent to no one being a member of that committee except true and tried Republicans, who will act not in a personal capacity so much as in the capacity of powerful representatives of a Republican Party. It will simply be the substitution of six men for three men. The additional numbers may create a spirit of more liberality in the Committee on Rules, but that committee itself will be but little easier to handle than the old committee."

Asked Cannon to Resign.

It became known to-day that yesterday morning, when everything was undecided, a prominent Republican Senator, who has frequently acted as the President's emissary in the parliamentary snarls of the upper chamber, called on Speaker Cannon and asked him to resign, for the sake of the party. It is not supposed that this Senator went at the President's request, for Mr. Taft seems to have determined to keep out of this fight, but the fact is interesting as showing the deep concern felt by the supporters of the Administration for the Administration programme should the deadlock in the House continue longer or lead to still more violent tactics. Mr. Cannon, as has since become evident, refused.

Already comment is being directed at the possible effect on the year's legislation of the curtailing of the repressive power of the Speaker. For the next few days it is likely that the House will devote itself to the passage of bills, and both sides are anxious to show to the country that the recent struggle was not entered into with any idea of blocking the President's programme.

The Speaker, though he refused to be interviewed, was quoted to-night as saying that nothing would be done under the Norris resolution until the end of the ten days allowed by the terms of the resolution.

"The terms of the resolution allow ten days," said a prominent regular this evening, "and most of them will be devoted to waiting."

CANNON LASHES HIS FOES.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 20—The fullest statement of Speaker Cannon's hatred and contempt for the insurgents who defeated him in the House yesterday was made by him late last night at the annual dinner of the Illinois Republican Association at the Riggs House. The presence of so many citizens of his own State seemed to loosen the old man's tongue, and though he had been under a tremendous strain for the past three days and had missed nearly all his sleep, he spoke of his successful adversaries with his old-time vigor.

He denounced as untrue the assumption that the Republicans any longer had a majority in the House. In the Senate, too, he added, the real majority was a hybrid concoction of a "slough from the Republican Party" joined with the Democrats. He taunted the insurgents for cowardice in their refusal to carry out the logic of the situation they had created by actually deposing him from the Chair, and without directly fixing the epithets to them, he made his references plain when he spoke of "curs" and of people "feeble minded," "abnormal," and "insane."

Asks Blessing on New Committee.

As for the new rules committee that is to be elected within the next ten days under the Norris resolution, Mr. Cannon called down on it the blessing of Heaven.

"They said the Speaker should not be a member of the Committee on Rules, which they made over into a committee of ten," he remarked. "Much depends upon the makeup of that committee. May God bless and keep these men, for so far as I am concerned, He only can bless them. Many so-called Republicans are in fact Populists, and are trying to outdo Bryanism."

He also rapped certain magazine writers. "It seems to be fashionable with magazines to decry organization," he said. "They do not seem to be satisfied unless they can govern the country."

Mr. Cannon's speech was greeted at its conclusion and interrupted throughout by enthusiastic applause.

"My God!" he cried, with great solemnity, "suppose this 158 pounds of common clay should drop dead to-night, what would the newspapers and magazines which make a profession of lying and slandering do then? My daughters, grandchildren, my son-in-law would be sorry. But the balance of the world would not have time to be sorry. There never was a truer word said than 'Let the dead bury its dead.' If that were not true, then the world would be one vast house of mourning.

"I know people who think they monopolize the wires from the earth up to the great White Throne. They don't give the majority of us a chance. They have cure-alls, they think God and one constitute a majority, forgetting that God alone is a majority and can well do without their help.

Must Have Cranks.

"We are thankful for Christian morality. But once in a while we find people who have a monopoly of all knowledge and therefore should be indicted and prosecuted under the Sherman anti-trust law. All who disagree with them are anathema. It is uncomfortable sometimes to live in a Government by the people. There will always be some who are feeble minded, abnormal, insane, or, to use a shorter and more common word, they are cranks. But we've got to have them.

"There was a new majority made in the House to-day. It consisted of the Democrats and a 15 per cent. slough from the Republican Party. They destroyed the Committee on Rules. Then what did they do? A resolution was presented declaring the office of Speaker vacant. Then what did these men, who have been denouncing my personality, these simon-pure followers of Cummins and La Follette, do then? Only eight of them had the courage of their convictions. The result was that, while I was elected Speaker by a majority of 26 last March, they refused to turn me out by a majority of 36.

"That was the way this Republican slough started out in its new alliance. And the Sunday papers will be out in the morning with stories about the end of Cannonism and Czarism, and perhaps a few of them will say what I said about the House being simply a government by majority.

Scorn for the Magazines.

"This combination abolished the Committee on Rules, which has, after all, simply the power to report to the House, although some seem to think that it is like the Biblical example of 'Let there be light, and there was light.' You in Washington know differently. But the people in the country apparently believe the uplift magazines and the cowardly members of Congress who wrought such havoc to-day. I am thankful I belong to the party of Lincoln, and Grant, and Garfield, and Roosevelt, and Taft, and whenever any charge is made upon it, whether from pulpit or magazine or Chautauqua circuit, I will defend it. I would rather keep the Republican faith and fail than to march with men who would disrupt the Republican Party and succeed.

"The country believes we have a majority of 44 in the House, whereas we have none, nor have we a majority in the Senate—but this news is not given to the country by certain publicists. They suppress it and distort it, and talk only about Cannonism and the defeat and rebuke of the Czar to-day.

"Some of us pray for the millennium, but I do not want it to come at any time unless the Almighty reaches down His finger and changes the human animal."

Madison's Scornful Reply.

The taunts of the Speaker drew an answer to-night from Representative Madison of Kansas, a prominent insurgent. He took the ground that the insurgents desired a midterm of chaos no more than did the Speaker, and that they voted against his dethronement for the same reason that he refused to resign.

"The Speaker must not lay the flattering unction to his soul that the insurgents voted for him when they declined to declare the chair vacant," said Mr. Madison. "In that moment of unprecedented excitement the insurgents kept their heads and did not vote for Cannon, but against the chaos and disorder that would have ensued from declaring the chair vacant at that time. Mr. Cannon said in his statement which he read to the House that he would not resign because he realized that to do so would create a condition of disorganization and disorder, and then he dared the Democrats and insurgents, by declaring the chair vacant, to create that disorder.

"His action was utterly inconsistent with his often professed devotion to his party. It was the bluff of a petulant old man smarting under the deprivation of the power that he had wielded for years, and the bluff was attempted to be called by a hot-headed, impetuous Southern Democrat against the better counsel of the leaders of his party. The insurgents refused to be stampeded and to assist in creating the chaos which the Speaker invited. It was a moment of severe trial, but, in my judgment, those who refused to be stampeded were better Republicans than the Speaker and his friends, who forced the issue. I have no criticism to make of any man who thought differently and acted differently. There was little time for thought and consideration, and each man acted according to his own judgment and conscience."

HOPE FOR PUBLICITY LAW.

Perry Belmont Thinks New House Leaders Will Favor It.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The enactment of a National campaign publicity law now is a possibility, in the opinion of Perry Belmont, President of the National Publicity Law Association. Mr. Belmont declared to-day that the defeat of Speaker Cannon would favorably and vitally affect the passage of a measure requiring the publication of campaign contributions.

"The insurgent Republicans generally, and the Democrats to a man are in favor of it," he declared. "The Speaker and the present Republican leaders in partial control of the House, backed by high tariff and associated interests, have stubbornly resisted the enactment of such a law."

TAFT HOPES FOR PROGRESS.

Payne's Words About Result in the House Cheer Him.

ALBANY, March 20.—President Taft read with interest to-day the details of the fight in the House of Representatives yesterday, when Speaker Cannon was shorn of his power as a member and the guiding influence of the all-powerful Committee on Rules. His only comment was this:

"I see that Mr. Payne, the floor leader, expresses the view that legislation undoubtedly will be forwarded by the disposition of this fight. I hope that this may prove true."

President Taft was informed some time ago by the insurgents that they would support the majority of the measures he has recommended to Congress in fulfillment of platform pledges. They went so far as to transmit to him a copy of resolutions adopted to that effect.

politics may be, or whether they be Easterner, Westerner, Northerner, or Southerner.

Beyond this statement he was unwilling to go, but it is possible to call attention to the significance of his insistence that the greeting must be absolutely non-partisan. The participants in this reception must not expect him to say anything about politics. He will not indorse the Administration. He will not attack it. He will not criticise it. He will say nothing concerning any public questions and will not discuss his own plans and his aspirations, if he has any.

From the time he emerged from the jungles he has said that he would not speak till after he had returned to America and had had an opportunity to ascertain the conditions himself, and he is steadfastly clinging to this determination. He asserts that he will continue to do so throughout his European trip and that any statement indicating what his plans or purposes are should be accepted as false, as he has not even made up his mind on many points that are of vital importance at home.

Stewart's Assertion Not Authentic.

It is apparent the assertion made at Washington by John A. Stewart, President of the New York State League of Republican Clubs, when asking President Taft to participate in the New York reception, that Col. Roosevelt had assured him that he would not be a candidate for anything was without justification. This should not be construed that Col. Roosevelt will be a candidate, for that would mean a declaration months, and even years, in advance of the possible occasion which might arise.

It is not expected that President Taft will participate in the reception, not because of any lack of desire to do so, but because he is the President and it is the duty of a private citizen to pay the first call on him in compliance with the usual custom.

Col. Roosevelt is willing to accept the reception because of the honor to be paid him as well as because of the desire to come in contact with the people he loves, especially those of the West, for whom he has always indicated a special affection. Undoubtedly this partiality actuated him in indicating that the reception include not only New Yorkers, but men and women of the entire country. He will reach New York on the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, sailing from Southampton on June 10.

Family a Charming Picture.

The American people can hardly realize the profound and touching character of the joy of the Roosevelt family over their reunion, or the charming picture on the Ibis of Col. Roosevelt surrounded by his family, each manifesting in a hundred different ways the pleasure of being together again. Col. Roosevelt had not seen his daughter or wife, and the latter had not seen Kermit or his father, for nearly a year. Ethel has changed as much to Col. Roosevelt as Kermit has to his mother. Ethel has made many friends in the Soudan and Egypt, who are preparing to make pleasant her stay at Luxor and Cairo.

Kermit has broadened out and wears a struggling mustache. He blushes whenever reference is made to any particular deed of daring on his part, such as jumping into a stream where crocodiles were after a drowning native, which became known only after forty-eight hours, and then only through native chatter. He is not so good a shot as his father, but a better hunter, the latter cheerfully admits, through his ability to run longer and faster. He doesn't know fear and in the beginning frightened his father half to death by going after a beast where the latter had the advantage. According to his companions on the expedition, a charging lion or elephant had absolutely no effect on his nerves. He got more wisdom as the hunting progressed.

Kermit is not looking forward to his return as his father is, preferring, boy like, to resume his jungle experiences. His mother naturally takes great pride in his conduct, but gets no news from him and has to turn to his father for information.

ROOSEVELT IN ROME APRIL 3.

ROME, March 20.—The King has been notified by the American Ambassador that Col. Roosevelt will arrive here on April 3, and his Majesty plans to receive the former President and his son Kermit on the morning of April 4.

The Queen will receive Col. Roosevelt, his wife, son, and daughter on the afternoon of the same day. Probably a Court dinner will be given in their honor in the evening.

PASTOR DENOUNCES SOCIALIST PRIMER

TEACHES THE LAW OF HATE

In a sermon on "Socialism as a Peril to Childhood," at the Metropolitan Temple last night, the Rev. Dr. John Wesley Hill sharply criticised a certain type of Socialistic institutions which he called "Socialist Sunday Schools."

In the course of his address Dr. Hill said that a number of these Socialist Sunday Schools have sprung up throughout this country in recent years. He said that there were at least ten in this city, found chiefly on the east side among the foreigners.

Dr. Hill said that in these Socialistic Sunday Schools little children were taught to venerate the "red flag" instead of the American flag. He said that the children were deliberately prepared to enter into "class warfare."

To show his audience how dangerous these "Socialist Sunday schools" were, Dr. Hill then produced one of the textbooks which, he said, was used in these schools. The book was entitled "A Socialist Primer." Dr. Hill read prose lessons and verse from the book. After reading the extracts, he pointed out that, by means of them many children of this city's poor were taught that "property owning is thievery," and that "the laws which protect property must be overthrown."

When Dr. Hill finished a well-dressed man who said he was studying for the Universalist Church ministry, rose in the audience and said that he was a Socialist. He said that the "Socialist Sunday schools" were doing a great deal of good. He did not deny that the remarkable "Socialist Primer," from which Dr. Hill read, was used in these "Socialist Sunday schools" for the children's instruction.

Dr. Hill began his attack on Socialism by saying that it sought to do away with marriage and have all children cared for by the State.

Dr. Hill, in speaking of the primer, said: "Here's one of these Socialist primers," he cried. "It's written by Nicholas Klein and illustrated by Ryan Walker. There's a picture of Karl Marx on the cover. On the back cover, where the publisher's name should be, is printed "The Appeal to Reason, Girard, Kansas." So I suppose The Appeal to Reason is publishing it. The lessons in this primer are treasonous and revolutionary. Its pictures brand the American workingman as a slave. Wealth is pictured as a fat man, an oppressor, and a tyrant."

Dr. Hill then read this "Lesson" from Page 14 of the book:

> Just look at these men. They are both men. One is fat and rich. One is lean and poor. Why is this? It must be that the Fat Man likes to work, and so by his toil gets all the good things; while the Thin Man will not work. It would seem so, but this is not the truth. Things are not as they seem. The Fat Man does not work at all. The Thin Man would like to work for his food, but he cannot get work, so he must beg. Is this not queer? Yes, it is very queer. But it will all be very plain to you, child, when I tell you that the Fat Man owns the land, the shops, and the mines, and lives on the wealth made by the men who toil. The Thin Man owns nought. Is it right for the Fat Man to own the means of life of the Thin Man? That is the Law now. But we must mend the Law.

"In these Socialist schools on the east side," continued Dr. Hill, "this doctrine, when it is taught, is arousing hatred and envy in the hearts of children whose parents have recently come here to escape political persecution in Europe. The east side children are taught these thoughts not only in simple prose sentences, but in verse."

Dr. Hill then read these verses out of the primer entitled "The Red Flag." The children, apparently, from the directions, are supposed to sing it to the tune of "Maryland, My Maryland":

THE RED FLAG.

The people's flag is deepest red;
It shrouded oft our martyred dead,

Chorus.

Then raise the scarlet standard high!
Within its shade we'll live and die.
Tho' cowards fear and traitors sneer

Here is another verse of the song:

With heads uncovered swear we all
To bear it onward till we fall.
Come dungeon dark or gallows grim,
This song shall be our parting hymn.

Dr. Hill, after reading the verses, said that such doctrine struck at this country's homes and civilization. Just after he had waved an American flag in the air and concluded his address a well-dressed man startled every one by arising to his feet accusing Dr. Hill of "ranting."

"I am a Christian and a student for the Christian ministry—the Universalist ministry," he said. "Two years ago I was against Socialism. But then I found that the Socialist doctrines were the most practical kind of Christianity. Our Socialist Sunday schools are doing a lot of good. That primer, however, was not written by the Socialist Party. If you really want to know what Socialism stands for, you should go to the party's political platform."

on the links of the Myopia Club, near Beverly. Mr. Taft warned his distinguished opponent that this course was the hardest in the United States, and also boasted that he had made the eighteen holes in less than 100. The Earl was nothing daunted at this, and accepted the challenge forthwith. The date of the match will be fixed after Congress adjourns. No newspaper men are to be permitted to be present.

The President and the Governor General declare they are going to fight out the eighteen holes without interference of any sort and decide the executive championship of North America. Both are looking forward to the contest of skill with unfeigned pleasure. Ex-Gov. David R. Francis of Missouri was a witness of the match-making.

The President accompanied Gov. Hughes to services at Calvary Baptist Church this morning. During the afternoon he called and had a cup of tea with Dr. and Mrs. Samuel B. Ward of this city, old friends in the Summers spent by Mr. and Mrs. Taft at Murray Bay, Canada.

The President had no political conferences of any sort during his stay. He did not see Senator Cobb, the new leader of the State Senate who was selected against the advice of Senator Root, who is presumed here to have represented the views of the National administration. William Loeb Jr., Collector of the Port of New York, also was the President's guest on his car to-night and will accompany him as far as New York.

JUSSERAND GETS CREDIT.

French Press Names American Tariff Compromise an "Armed Peace."

PARIS, March 20.—The French newspapers unanimously welcome the news that a tariff war with the United States has been averted. In this matter they give much credit to the skillful tactics of the French Ambassador at Washington, agreeing that M. Jusserand accomplished everything possible in a difficult situation on the theory that "a bad compromise is better than a lawsuit."

Some of the papers point out with regret that the agreement is indefinite as to duration, and that it leaves the United States in a position to apply the maximum should any new French tariff regulation be considered "discriminatory."

The Matin says: "Franco-American commercial relations now enter upon a régime of armed peace."

Legislators Dread the Effect of Insurance Revelations.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 20.—The disclosures made at the very outset of the investigation into the affairs of the fire insurance companies which is being conducted in New York by State Superintendent of Insurance Hotchkiss have caused a sensation at the Capitol. To an immeasurable degree, these disclosures have added to the discomfiture of the Republican leaders in and out of the Legislature, who are maintaining that with the end of the Allds bribery investigation the lid must be replaced neatly and screwed down tightly.

Speaker Wadsworth, who has openly taken this attitude, was here to-day, but declined to make any comment on the new scandal. It is admitted, though, that the developments at the first session of the fire insurance investigation may force that broader investigation on the subject of legislative corruption for which Senator Root, Gov. Hughes, and his friends in the Senate have been contending, and which the bosses are preparing to resist with all the force they can muster. To-day the air at the Capitol is full of rumors of new revelations. It is known that Supt. Hotchkiss has examined very closely into the affairs of the fire insurance concerns and that he has unearthed documentary evidence indicating that they maintain a clearing house for legislative corruption—their method for defeating the constantly recurring strike bills which marked the days of the Black Horse Cavalry and to bring about the passage of laws favorable to the interests they represented.

There is one thought in connection with the Hotchkiss investigation that brings a grain of comfort to the worried Republicans. They say there is good ground for the belief that if the Hotchkiss probe is sunk deeply enough it may reflect some discredit on some Democrats. For some years the handling of fire insurance legislation was a specialty with certain prominent members of the minority at Albany. A perusal of the list of legislators assigned to the insurance committees of both branches of the Legislature in 1901, where bills affecting fire insurance concerns were prepared for final reading prior to the Allds investigation, were members of these committees.

Congressman George R. Malby of St. Lawrence, who was a witness in the Allds investigation and who in 1901 introduced the highway bill Senator Conger testified was beaten after a $6,000 corruption fund had been distributed in the Capitol, was a member of the Senate Committee on Insurance. On the Assembly committee were Frank J. Price, who volunteered the information that he had bought Fifth Avenue stage stock for the little group of legislators who made their home with the late Speaker Nixon at the "House of Commons" at the time a bill affecting vitally the future of the concern that took over its affairs was pending before the Legislature, and Martin J. Cadin, at present Chief of Police of Syracuse, who introduced a bill similar to the Malby bill in 1903 and who was a witness in the Allds investigation also.

Of the Senate Committee, Messrs. Parsons, Raines, Thornton, and Ambler are dead. Senator Parsons, who was Chairman of the committee, came from Rochester and was affiliated with George W. Aldridge.

FIRE HORSES RUN AWAY.

John Kahilly, driver of the hose tender for Fire Engine 41, had a narrow escape from death yesterday afternoon, when his horses ran away after the tender had crashed into a trolley car at 138th Street and Third Avenue. The crew of the tender was responding to a false alarm sent in from Lincoln Avenue and 132d Street. In the broad square where Morris and Third Avenues meet 138th Street there were several men and women just about to board a Fordham car. Kahilly, in trying to avoid running down a woman who stood near the curb, pulled his horses too sharply, and the tender wheel smashed into the vestibule of the car, throwing the motorman, Cornelius Rowe, to the street.

When the crash came, Kahilly was thrown from his seat and landed on the back of one of the horses. Both animals lurched forward, and with the driver clinging to the collar of one, started down Lincoln Avenue as fast as they could run. The front wheels of the tender had been wrenched loose from the rest of the vehicle and rattled along behind. They had raced only a few hundred feet when Kahilly lost his grip on the collar and fell. Clutching wildly, he managed to grasp the single tree, and, with his legs dragging along the street, held on.

Policeman John Burns of the Alexander Avenue Police Station saw the runaways approaching. He ran into the middle of the street and grabbed one of the horses by the bridle. The policeman was dragged half a block before the runaways came to a stop. Kahilly, badly bruised and exhausted, dropped to the street and was picked up by several men. But he was able to go home a little later.

CHINESE IMPRESARIO GONE.

Cavanaugh Has Been Missing Since Thursday—Alarm Sent Out.

It was learned last night that a general alarm was sent out on Saturday for William Cavanaugh, for fifteen years manager of the Chinese Theatre at 5 Doyers Street. Cavanaugh was last seen about 2 o'clock Thursday morning when he had a considerable amount of money in his possession.

His disappearance was reported to the police by his wife who saw him last on Wednesday. Cavanaugh lived at 163 East 107th Street. He was manager of the Chinese Theatre until it closed last December on account of trouble between the Tongs and came back to that place when the theatre was reopened by Raymond Hitchcock on February 26.

AUDIENCE GAVE THE SHOW.

A theatrical troupe that was to have presented "The Accused Woman" at Barren's Hall, Bayonne, N. J., on Saturday night returned to Manhattan yesterday, having given no performance.

The company had been advertised for several weeks, and a large audience gathered at the hall, but when 9 o'clock came and the company had not appeared the audience decided to hold a dance. Five minutes later the company showed up. The manager wanted the play to go on, but the audience preferred to dance.

The business manager effected a compromise and received part of the receipts at the box office.

Senator Daniel Rallies.

DAYTONA, Fla., March 20.—The condition of United States Senator Daniel of Virginia, who has been lingering between life and death here for some days as the result of a stroke of paralysis, is somewhat improved. This afternoon the Senator was nearly conscious for about an hour, and his attending physicians feel much encouraged.

Killed on a Long Island Trestle.

ROCKVILLE CENTRE, L. I., March 20.—Paul N. Van Wagner, son of John Van Wagner of 877 Union Street, Brooklyn, was struck by a trolley car on the overhead trestle between this village and Lynnbrook early this morning and instantly killed. He had been under treatment at a private sanitarium at Amityville, and was returning to his parents. He had started to walk the path of the trestle to Brooklyn, following the tracks.

HIS BLOOD, THEN LIFE GIVEN FOR FAMILY

HE FELL FROM A SCAFFOLD

Married Fifteen Months, He Was at Work on His First Painter's Job in Six Months.

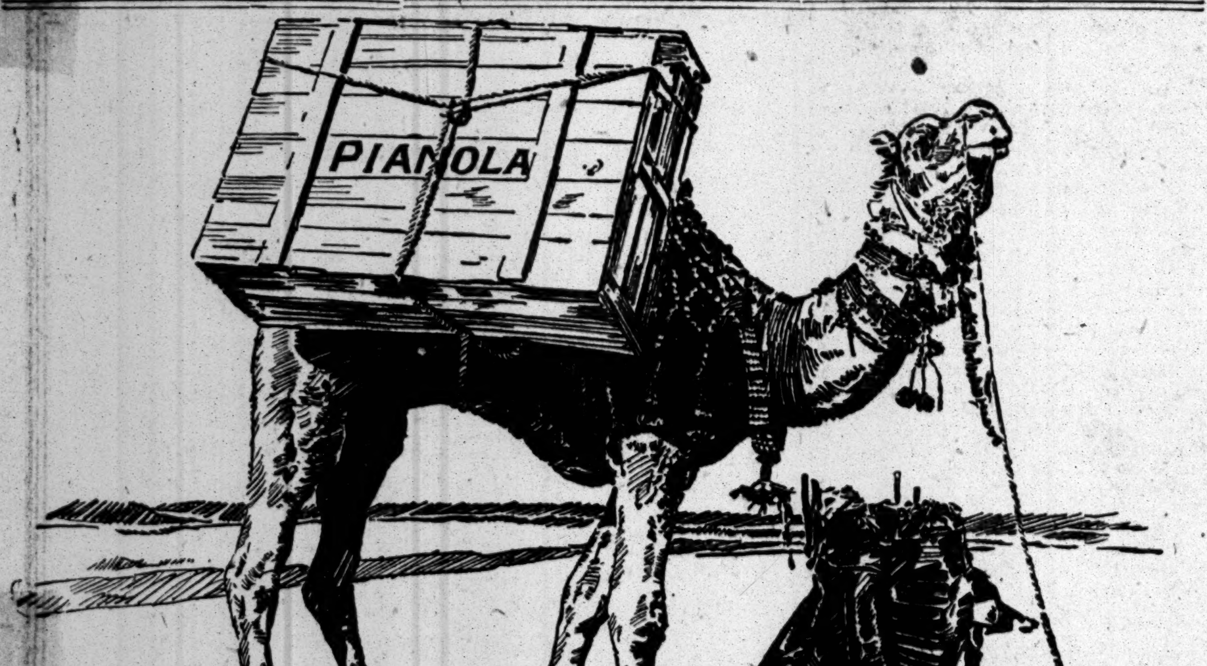
It developed yesterday that Bernard Liser, the house painter who was killed Saturday morning by a fall of five stories from a scaffolding at 1,812 Amsterdam Avenue, had submitted to an operation for blood transfusion at Fordham Hospital on Lincoln's Birthday to keep his wife and five-months-old child from starvation with the $45 offered by the hospital authorities. Since the operation Liser had been a victim of sudden fainting spells, and it was presumably due to these that he lost his balance on the scaffolding on Saturday.

Liser was married fifteen months ago, and lived with his wife in a five-room flat at 541 West 133d Street. Six months ago he lost his position as a house painter, and couldn't get another. A few days before Lincoln's Birthday Liser saw an advertisement offering a reward of $45 for the person who would submit to an operation of blood transfusion at the Fordham Hospital. Liser went to the hospital and was selected from among many candidates.

The operation was performed by Dr. Eugene Black and Dr. W. J. Walker of the hospital staff. After staying in the hospital for two days, Liser received the $45, and was allowed to go home. He felt weak, and was unable to work for a couple of weeks while Liser still went around the city looking for another job.

Two weeks after leaving the hospital Liser was seized with sudden fainting spells. Three weeks ago he fainted in the Seventy-seventh Street station of the Subway. An ambulance from the Flower Hospital was called, but Liser refused to go to the hospital. He continued his rounds of the employment agencies and the house painting contractors and finally secured a job to paint a house at 1,812 Amsterdam Avenue.

With Charles Reynolds of 416 West Fifty-sixth Street Liser hoisted the painter's platform to the fifth story Saturday morning at 8 o'clock. At 10 o'clock Reynolds heard a gasp, and, turning, saw Liser fall to the platform. Reynolds started after him, but before he could get to the other end of the platform Liser had fallen to the concrete five stories below.



The Pianola in Furthest Australia

This picture is drawn direct from a photograph taken by the manager of our branch houses in Australia. It became necessary to resort to transportation by camel, because the purchaser of the instrument lives 600 miles from Melbourne, and 300 miles from the nearest railway station. Two interesting points about the PIANOLA are emphasized by this incident:

1st—Superior Construction

"This is the interior of Australia," writes our Australian manager, "and their temperatures in summer run up as high as 120 degrees in the shade and 170 and 180 degrees in the sun. We have several instruments in such localities, some having been there for the past seven or eight years.

"During that time we have never had a complaint and the instruments have never given any trouble whatever." I can assure you that if the construction of the PIANOLA was in the slightest degree defective, we would not be able to carry on business in a country such as this, for it would be literally impossible to keep these instruments in order."

It is significant that in Australia the PIANOLA practically has the field to itself.

2nd—Universal Leadership

In every country of the world—in South America, in Europe, in the Far East—the PIANOLA completely dominates the Piano-player field. There have never been an article of American manufacture which has more conspicuously held its leadership.

In some countries there is a prejudice against goods of foreign manufacture. Also, some Players made in European countries are sold at less than half the PIANOLA'S price. Yet notwithstanding such competition, the PIANOLA, by sheer force of its musical and constructional superiority has continued its supremacy, both in prestige and in actual sales.

KEENAN ONCE MORE GOES EXCISE RAIDING

SAW OPEN SALOON FROM CAR

Impressed a Reluctant Patrolman as a Witness and Was Served with Whisky—Ordered a Meal, Prisoner Says.

Patrolman Thomas Keenan of the Madison Street Police Station, who was transferred lately from the Bronx, after enforcing the liquor law up there, will answer charges this morning for conduct unbecoming a policeman on account of other arrests which he went back to his old precinct to make in his hours of leisure, once more arrested a Bronx bartender. The bartender was Hans Gasderg, an employe of Wilhelm Krumsiek, whose saloon and hotel is at 38 Westchester Square. The time was yesterday morning.

Krumsiek is a friend of William Schultz, who with Henry Lehden keeps the hotel at 4,214 Third Avenue, which Keenan raided last week, but the policeman declares he stumbled on the alleged unlawful liquor selling in Krumsiek's place entirely by accident.

He says that, wearied with his night's work in the Madison Street Station, he fell asleep on the Third Avenue elevated as he was going home. He rode by the 149th Street station, and so went on to 177th Street, where he could get a Williamsbridge street car to take him home. He was riding on the back platform when he saw that Krumsiek's saloon was open. Moreover, he saw, he alleges, the barkeeper put two glasses of beer on the bar.

He got off the car and went in search of a patrolman. A block away he found Policeman James Johnston of the Westchester Station on post, and persuaded him to come and buy drinks in order to establish a case against the hotel. Johnston knew all about Keenan and was loath to go, but at length he was induced to do it, and the two policemen entered Krumsiek's back room.

Keenan ordered a glass of whisky. Johnston said he would take a cigar. Gasderg, the bartender, produced the drink and turned away. Keenan put down a quarter, but the bartender refused to take it. He walked away, and Keenan drank some of his whisky and passed the glass to Johnston. Johnston smelled it, without tasting it, and then Keenan drank it up.

Then he arrested Gasderg, and took him, with Johnston, to the Westchester Police Station, where he was accused of having given away a glass of whisky at unlawful hours. Lieut. Joyce, who was on the desk, asked Keenan:

"What right had you to take Johnston off post?"

"I needed him as a witness," replied the Madison Street patrolman. "I saw a violation of the law, and I was obliged to do my duty."

According to Gasderg, Keenan was well known to him, as he had often been to the saloon in his service in the Westchester precinct.

"We closed at midnight on Saturday," said the bartender, "according to the law. We always open the hotel at 5 o'clock Sundays and weekdays for the accommodation of our boarders. We have a strict rule of the house never to serve a policeman in uniform unless he orders a meal, and both Keenan and Johnston were in uniform.

"What happened was this: As soon as Keenan had taken his drink I turned to go to the kitchen to get him some breakfast. He handed me a quarter, and I said to him:

"'Wait till I get the rest of the stuff.'

"I had the kitchen fire already lighted to serve breakfasts, but before I could go into the kitchen Keenan followed me into the bar and told me to show him my license. I did so, and he at once said:

"'I place you under arrest.'"

Wilhelm Krumsiek, the proprietor, said last night that he had been thirty-two years in the hotel business, and had never before had a complaint made against him.

"I know Keenan well," he said, "and often gave him drinks when he was stationed here. I also know Johnston, and consider him a very good policeman. He has been here for the last ten years. It is against my strict orders ever to serve a policeman in uniform with liquor unless he asks for a meal as well, and I was very much surprised to hear of what had happened."

The bartender was taken yesterday morning before Magistrate Butts in the Westchester Court. He asked for an adjournment to consult counsel. The court was about to put the case over till today when Keenan said:

"Your Honor, in connection with other excise arrests, I am to be tried on charges of conduct unbecoming a policeman and violation of the rules at Headquarters tomorrow and cannot be here."

Magistrate Butts then adjourned the case till 10 o'clock to-morrow, holding Gasderg in $500 bail. Krumsiek put up the money.

HONOR FATHER McMILLAN.

Nearly 1,000 Graduates of St. Paul's Sunday School Attend Celebration.

Nearly 1,000 graduates of the Sunday School of the Church of St. Paul the Apostle, Columbus Avenue and Sixtieth Street, filled the chapel last night for the golden jubilee celebration and to pay tribute to Father Thomas McMillan, Sunday School Director, whose work in the last quarter of a century has built up an average attendance of 1,600.

Father McMillan, in his talk, referred to the many art treasures of St. Paul's Sunday School that have been of such value in furnishing object lessons for the instruction of the younger attendants, as well as a delight to the older members, many of whom have passed their majorities.

Dudley Field Malone, Assistant Corporation Counsel and a graduate of St. Paul's Sunday School, spoke of Father McMillan's success in interesting the younger children by gaining their sympathy and confidence.

MEN REJECT TERMS TO END CAR STRIKE

Vote to Continue Struggle in Philadelphia Until All Their Demands Are Granted.

MORE PAY WAS OFFERED

And Strikers Were to be Taken Back Without Prejudice, but Without Full Union Recognition.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—After a day of conferences, the Executive Committee of the striking carmen late tonight rejected terms offered by the traction company and voted to continue the strike until all their demands are granted.

These terms had been arranged by W. D. Mahon, President of the International Carmen's Union, and United States Senator Penrose and State Senator McNichol, representing the company. It was thought that the plan would be accepted.

The basis of settlement offered was in effect as follows:

First—All the strikers to be at once taken back; as many as possible on their former runs, and all to have regular runs as soon as practical, but those who have no runs at present to be carried on the payrolls at $1.50 a day until they get runs; all the men to be taken back without prejudice or discrimination, and their status to be the same as though there had been no strike.

Second—The wage scale to be 23 cents an hour for all men employed, (an increase of 1 cent an hour,) and this rate to increase 1 cent per year until it reaches 25 cents an hour.

Third—The 178 men who were discharged on Feb. 19, whose discharge precipitated the strike, to have their cases taken up by arbitration of President Kruger and one of their own representatives, and in cases where the evidence fails to show that the men were discharged for just cause such men to be restored to duty.

Fourth—The carmen to have the right to form separate unions or to belong to no union, and any group of men or individuals to have the right to present grievances.

Fifth—The men to have the right to wear a union badge if they so desire, but the badge is not to be over three-quarters of an inch in diameter and not to be conspicuously displayed.

President Greenawalt of the State Federation of Labor early in the day notified affiliated unions throughout the State to hold the order for a State-wide strike in temporary abeyance, pending the result of the negotiations under way.

Senator Penrose and Senator McNichol, who were in conference with W. D. Mahon and other labor leaders in Senator Penrose's office until after 3 o'clock in the morning, returned at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon and were again in conference until after 6 o'clock. Attorney Francis Shunk Brown and Frank Feeney, Superintendent of the Bureau of Elevator Construction in City Hall, a former President of the Central Labor Union, were also in attendance.

No officials of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company were present at the latter conference. It is stated that another meeting was held earlier in the day at Mayor Reyburn's residence, at which President Kruger and other officials of the company met Senator Penrose and informed him what concessions the company would be willing to make.

PAPER STRIKE SPREADS.

Watertown and Maine Men Join Other Strikers in This State and Vermont.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERTOWN, March 20.—All papermakers employed in Watertown division of the International Paper Company, embracing Ontario Mill, C. R. Mill, No. 4 Mill, and probably the Sulphite Mill, tonight voted to join the general strike which is being waged against the company at Glens Falls, Fort Edward, Palmers Falls, Bellows Falls, and Niagara Falls in a demand for a 10 per cent. increase in wages and no discrimination against the union.

No man will report for duty at the local mills to-morrow morning. President Carey of the union, whose headquarters are here, received a telegram to-night announcing that the 600 employes of the International mills in the Livermore Falls (Me.) division had also voted to-day to join the other strikers. The situation confronting the International people here is a bad one, the region having already been gleaned of available material to aid the strikebreakers in other places.

To-night's mass meeting, called to decide upon a strike, was a long one, but when the first vote was taken every man determined to walk out. International mills are still running at Rumford Falls, Piercefield, Turners Falls, Franklin, Orono, and Berlin. The only mills of any size are at Rumford Falls. President Carey predicted that before the week was over he would call out men in other mills, until the entire system became involved.

A. S. Fairbanks, an employe of the International Company, left here to-night for Albany with several strikebreakers, but before he boarded the train he was thoroughly searched for concealed weapons. As the train was pulling through the yards one of the men who had been hired changed his mind and jumped off amid the cheers of the union men gathered at the depot. No hostile demonstration was made against the departing strikebreakers.

CLEVELAND STRIKERS RIOT.

Garment Men Charged with Drawn Revolvers, and Wreck Houses.

CLEVELAND, March 20.—One man was shot, several others were injured, and considerable property was damaged in a riot which broke out here late this afternoon between several hundred striking garment makers and their sympathizers and a party of strikebreakers.

The trouble started in a fist fight between two of the strikers and the two men who have taken their places. In a few moments a mob of over 500 men had and their friends. The strikebreakers, gathered, consisting mainly of strikers who were greatly in the minority, were being roughly handled, when a squad of private detectives, hired to protect them, charged the mob with drawn revolvers. In the free-for-all fight which followed one of the strikers was shot through the leg.

This incident infuriated the man's friends, who overpowered the detectives, and rushing toward a row of small houses where the strikebreakers have been lodged, broke into three of them, threatening to kill their occupants, who fled before them. The buildings were practically wrecked before police reserves, hastily summoned, were able to control the mob. No arrests were made.

Alexander Printz, head of the principal firm involved in the strike, appealed tonight to Mayor Baehr for extra police protection, as he feared further disorder.

FIREMEN COMPLAIN OF DELAY.

Declare That There Seems No Chance of Successful Mediation.

CHICAGO, March 20.—Prospects for the settlement by Federal mediation of the controversy between 27,000 firemen on Western railroads and the Railroad Managers were said by W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, to-night to be remote.

"We have had four days of argument, and we seem to be no nearer a settlement than when we began," said Mr. Carter. "The railroads still refuse to arbitrate the points in dispute, which they say are questions only of discipline and authority and are not arbitratable. When we agreed to lay our case before the Federal mediators, it was with the distinct understanding that action would be swift, and we hoped to have an adjustment within forty-eight hours. We declared at that time that our vote to strike was not annulled, and we still stick to that view. We have the power to call a strike unless something is done soon."

United States Commissioner of Labor C. P. Neill heard arguments from the men to-day, and it is expected they will continue to-morrow.

BUILDING ULTIMATUM SERVED.

But Programme of Union Makes a Strike Improbable.

The officers of unions in the building trades which decided on Saturday on a sympathetic strike on all building contracts under the Building Trades Employers' Association by March 28 if the demands of the striking steamfitters are not granted sent a copy of the ultimatum to every union last evening. The demands of the Mosaic Workers' Union are supported in like manner.

In case the employers disregard the ultimatum, it was stated yesterday, the steamfitters will be asked to decide whether a general sympathetic strike will be ordered, or if strikes will be ordered on individual contracts. In the latter case the Employers' Association would order a lockout of every union participating in the strike, and the unions would hold that the responsibility for causing chaos in the building trades would rest with the employers.

On behalf of the employers it was stated that they wanted to keep up the arbitration plan indifinitely, but the steamfitters and mosaic workers violated it. Some of the employers fear that the sympathetic strike will occur owing to the desire of a certain faction to restore the old order of things.

POLICE ON BAKESHOP WAGONS.

Someone Has Been Throwing Oil Over Products of a Bronx Company.

When the six delivery wagons of the Consumers' Baking Company start out early this morning there will be a policeman seated near the tailboards of each gudarding the loaves and rolls and pastry. Officials of the baking company say they have no strike on their hands, but President Frank Anges complained last night at the Alexander Avenue Police Station that several times in the last week kerosene and turpentine had been thrown into his wagons, ruining many dollars worth of bread. Just why any one should throw oil upon his bread, Mr. Anges said, he could not tell, unless it was because of some trouble he had had with one of his employes a few weeks ago.

He would not explain what the trouble was, but said that none of his men had struck lately, and that all of them seemed to be satisfied.

MANZ GIRL BOUGHT POISON.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, March 20.—Katharine, or Katie, Manz, the sixteen-year-old girl whose disappearance precedes the finding of the body of her elder sister, Elizabeth Manz, aged 19, in the kitchen of her father's home at Massillon Friday afternoon, has not been found. To-day, however, a suitcase containing clothes was found in Akron, belonging to the dead girl, which Katie was reported to have carried off. It has been found, also, that Katie Manz purchased strychnine in a Massillon drug store some weeks before the tragedy, and the Coroner says Elizabeth Manz died from strychnine poisoning. Leo Farrar, a former Canton man, who lives in Detroit and was Elizabeth's fiancé, was in Massillon to-day. He does not know of any reason for suicide.

The stomach of the dead girl will be brought to Cleveland to-morrow for an examination by experts at Western Reserve University in the hope that it may throw some light on the affair. It is known that Katherine Manz was envious of her sister's good clothes. Witnesses have appeared who say she had been heard to make threats against her sister because Elizabeth held her under restraint and had threatened to send her to the House of the Good Shepherd at Cleveland.

John Manz, a brother, told the police that when he came home to dinner Friday Katharine refused to admit him to the kitchen, serving him in the dining room, which, he said, was most unusual. The lad said that Katharine told him that Elizabeth was sick in the kitchen. He did not see Elizabeth Friday.

The father of the sisters informed the police that when he returned from work Friday he found the house locked. He entered through a window. The kitchen window shades were drawn and the windows covered with paper. In the gloom he stumbled over the body of his daughter, which had been covered with a quilt. Katharine was missing. Much of Elizabeth's clothing, too, was missing.

An interurban car conductor said today that Katharine Manz was among his passengers to Canton Friday night.

Manager Gone, Musicians Stranded.

Eighteen women musicians and six men, members of King's Orchestra, which played last week at the Empire Theatre, in Hoboken, are stranded there. They say that Edward H. King, manager of the orchestra, disappeared on Saturday night without paying off. Several of the women owe boarding house bills and are in straits.

HAS MANIA FOR AUTOS NOW HELD AS FORGER

MANY CARS TAKEN AND SOLD

Checks Purporting to Have Been Certified Given in Payment—Harris Has a Good Record.

Known, according to automobile dealers, as "the certified check man," and obsessed, according to his friends, with a passion for automobiles, Robert Harris, a clerk of the Ordnance Department at the United States proving grounds, Sandy Hook, was held yesterday in the West Side Court by Magistrate Corrigan on the charge of attempted grand larceny. It was alleged that he presented a forged certified check for $3,175 to the Roskam-Scott Company, 1,780 Broadway, in payment for a car.

A. E. Hartcorn, a lawyer of 20 Nassau Street, in court said Harris was a personal friend, they having lived in adjoining houses for some years at Atlantic Highlands, where, he said, Harris has always borne the best reputation. At the proving grounds he has had charge of thousands of dollars worth of property without the slightest suspicion of his integrity.

Motoring His Only Pastime.

"The only explanation of the matter," said Mr. Hartcorn, "is that his mania for automobiles has driven him crazy. Besides an occasional game of billiards, his one diversion has been riding in autos. He used to look after them as carefully as though they were his children. He took his friends out with him, and so became acquainted with nearly everybody at Atlantic Highlands.

"We never suspected that he was doing anything wrong, and as he never was absent from the Highlands except on short automobile trips, I do not see how he could have disposed of machines, as is alleged, all over the country. If it turns out that he is really guilty it will be found that he has been led into crooked ways by his mania for automobiles."

Gave Check for Machine.

Harris, it is charged, signed a contract last Monday with the Roskam-Scott Company for a machine and paid a deposit of $100. On Saturday he dropped in after banking hours and tendered a check drawn in his favor on the First National Bank of South Amboy, N. J., and bearing the name of John M. Wilson, a manufacturer. On it was a mark which purported to be the certification of the bank.

As there was no means of verifying the check on Saturday afternoon, the firm let him take the machine, but as during the week their suspicions had been aroused, they sent Detective Boyle with him as a chauufeuer.

The detective soon revealed his identity and drove Harris to a branch detective bureau. On his way he alleges Harris confessed that he had intended to sell the car in Philadelphia.

Identified by Another Dealer.

Harry Pike of the Chalmers-Detroit Company in the West Side Court yesterday identified Harris as a man who had paid a deposit a year ago on a contract for an automobile. Then he returned after the close of banking hours and tendered a certified check for the balance. Mr. Pike declared that he had asked the man to come back again during banking hours and had refused to take the check at that time, but that he had never seen him again till yesterday.

Several Philadelphia dealers are expected to be in court to-morrow to see if they can identify Harris. It is alleged he is the man who has sold them cars at greatly reduced prices, telling them it was necessary for him to realize quickly on the machines.

"Automobile dealers," said Mr. Pike, "have been on the lookout for some months for a man whom they call 'The Certified Check Man.' He has had a regular course of operations. First he would write on the letterhead of some manufacturing firm stating that he was thinking of buying a car. Then he would turn up himself, always well-dressed and bearing himself as though he had plenty of money.

Always Had Certified Check.

"He would examine the cars and talk about them well and would finally select one, paying from $50 to $100 down to bind the contract. A few days later he would be back with a certified check for the rest of the money, the checks being always drawn on an out-of-town institution and presented after it was closed. Generally he would be allowed to take the car without further delay.

"Meanwhile he would be writing to dealers in neighboring cities deploring the necessity of sacrificing his machine. Sickness, a sudden call abroad, and financial losses were all used by him as a reason for selling, and the dealers, glad to buy a new car cheap, accepted his offer."

It is believed that several of the New York automobile dealers and perhaps the American Bankers' Association will take an interest in the case.

Bunnells Recovering from Auto Hurts.

ATLANTIC CITY, March 20.—Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bunnell, who were injured yesterday when their automobile ran off the boulevard into the meadows, are now entirely out of danger. Mr. Bunnell's arm was broken, but he was not otherwise hurt. Mrs. Bunnell's injuries are less severe than at first believed. The car will be sent to New York for repairs.

DR. LAMBERT IN AUTO CRASH.

His Motor Ran Head-on Into Crosstown Trolley Car.

An automobile carrying Dr. Samuel W. Lambert of 130 East Thirty-fifth Street collided with an eastbound Eighty-sixth Street crosstown car in the Transverse Road, about 150 yards east of the Central Park bridle path, late yesterday afternoon. The physician suffered several cuts on the face from the shattered glass of the automobile. The front vestibule of the car was damaged. Dr. Lambert returned to his home. The doctor's chauffeur, who said he was George Hinds of 348 West Forty-eighth Street, was arrested on the charge of reckless driving and taken to the Arsenal station. He was later bailed out.

The accident was due to the fact that the chauffeur did not see the approaching car. Dr. Lambert's motor was moving westward on the transverse road, a short distance in the rear of a westbound Eighty-sixth Street crosstown car. The police say that the chauffeur suddenly attempted to send the auto ahead of the west-bound car, and in so doing increased his speed and shot to the left. The machine had barely reached a point abreast of the rear platform of the westbound car when the east-bound car met it in a head-on collision.

MORE AUTOS IN JERSEY.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, March 20.—The collections for licenses in the automobile department of the office of Secretary of State for February shows that whereas $245,000 was collected in 1909 for auto licenses, $350,000 is more likely to be the total when the 1910 record is finished. The receipts for February issued auto licenses, bad weather at that, were $29,047.95, as against $19,799.81 for the corresponding month of 1909, or an increase of $9,248.14 for February, 1910, over February, 1909.

The total increase for the three months of December, January, and February, constituting the first three months of the new year's licenses, was $31,693.49.

Havemeyer's Grandson Hurt in Auto.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 20.—Roland Mayer, 17 years old, grandson of Theodore A. Havemeyer, had his right leg fractured in an automobile mishap on Madison Avenue, near the Twombly estate, this afternoon. He was driving a runabout when one of the front wheels collapsed and the machine crashed into a tree. The car was wrecked. Besides the injury to his leg, Mayer was bruised and badly lacerated.

CONVICTED FOR FAKE SPORTS.

Mabray and 13 Associates Found Guilty of Illegal Use of Mails.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, March 20.—John C. Mabray and thirteen of his associates to-day were found guilty, in the United States District Court, of illegal use of the mails to promote fake sporting events. The jurors disagreed as to Robert E. L. Goddard of San Antonio.

Those found guilty are John C. Mabray, Leon Loser, Tom S. Robinson, Willard Powell, Clarence Class, Edward Leach, Edward K. Morris, (colored,) Clarence Forbes and Harry Forbes, both pugilists; Frank Scott, Ed McCoy, Winford S. Harris, Bert R. Shores, and William (Ole) Marsh.

Judge Smith McPherson announced that the prisoners would be sentenced on Monday. The defendants accepted the verdict without show of feeling, and Mabray shook hands with several of the jurors.

Two years' imprisonment and a fine of $10,000 is the maximum penalty that may be inflicted by the court. Robert Goddard is under indictment in the Nebraska district of the Federal court, and will be tried again when other defendants are brought into that court.

With the conviction of these defendants the Government believes it has broken up a swindling combination the receipts of which since its organization about ten years ago are shown to have exceeded $5,000,000. Conviction was largely due to the finding of a trunk in Mabray's home, which contained a complete documentary record of the transactions of the combination for a period of four years, with the names and addresses of over 200 persons who had acted as go-betweens in various transactions. They lived in nearly every State. There were fourteen branches in various parts of the country, all operated from one city.

Foot racing, wrestling, prizefighting, horse racing, and wire tapping were the specialties offered to victims on which to make "easy money." The victim was usually first approached by an actual friend who had been primed by a regular "steerer," who pretended that he had a cousin who was secretary to a coterie of men of great wealth who were traveling over the country for pleasure. The victim was invited to assist in swindling these rich men and in turn was swindled on a sporting event which proved to be "fixed" against him instead of in his favor.

JUMPS TO DEATH ASLEEP.

Somnambulist Throws Himself from Fifth Floor of Brooklyn House.

While in a somnambulistic state early yesterday morning, Thomas Dobbin, Jr., fell through an open window at his home on the fifth floor of an apartment house at 259 Steuben Street, Brooklyn, and, dropping to the yard, was instantly killed. Dobbin was employed as an Inspector in the Bureau of Buildings, in the Brooklyn Borough Hall.

Dobbin was an occasional sleep-walker, but he never suffered through his somnambulism until yesterday. At about 4 o'clock in the morning he rose from his bed, making his way noiselessly to the dining room in the rear. One of the windows had been left open. The sill was but a foot or so above the floor. Dobbin, who was in a deep sleep, walked to this window, struck the low sill with his legs, and plunged outward. His brother, John Dobbin, heard him cry out as he fell. Rushing from his bedroom, John peered down into the yard, and beheld the body of a man. Finding that his brother was missing he realized the awful truth and hurried to the yard.

On reaching his brother's side the latter seemed lifeless, but a call was sent to the Cumberland Street Hospital for an ambulance. Surgeon Searles, who responded, found that the sleepwalker was dead. Several years ago Inspector Dobbin's aged father, Thomas Dobbin, broke one of his legs by falling downstairs while walking in his sleep.

Prizefight Prisoners Go Free.

Honor Dead Russian Revolutionist.

A memorial service was held yesterday by the Russian Social Revolutionists of this city at Clinton Hall, 151 Clinton Street, in honor of Gregory Gershuner, organizer for the revolutionary party, who escaped from a prison in Siberia, to which he was sent, and made his way to Switzerland, where he died about a year ago. Gershuner was smuggled out of prison by those who were friendly to him in a sauerkraut barrel.

MOTHER SAVES CHILD AFIRE.

Then Mrs. Brown and Maid Check Fire in Curtains Till Engines Come.

After tearing off the flaming dress of her three-year-old daughter Blanche, who had set herself afire with matches, Mrs. Sarah Brown of 423 Osborn Street, Brooklyn, wife of a real estate operator, turned fire-fighter last evening, and with other women saved her home from destruction. Flames from the child's blazing clothing set fire to curtains as the little one ran frantically from room to room.

The mother reached the little one in time to save her from injury, although her own hands and wrists were burned. Then she and a maid got pails of water and attacked the fire in the curtains. They managed to hold the flames in check until the arrival of firemen.

The flames were extinguished after having caused a damage to the rooms and furnishings of $150, and then Mrs. Brown fainted. A physician revived her.

H. S. Waterman Killed by Fall.

Mr. Waterman was born in Orange about forty years ago, and lived in this city until six months ago, when he went to Reading.

Protective Motor Bonnets
for Women

"Dr. J. C. White, the noted Boston authority, says motoring is bad for the hair."—Daily Press.

Even the most modest of us occasionally impersonates Chantecler. To the vigorous young American spirit an obstacle is an opportunity—an opportunity to overcome, surmount, overthrow. Does the American woman abandon motoring when her physician tells her it promotes baldness? Not at all. She has faith in her Bonnet designer.

But—and it is here we boast just a little—our designer had anticipated the verdict of the physician, and we are even now offering Bonnets that meet his every objection. They are remarkably becoming to most faces too, and have a chic style of their own.

LEAVE NEW YORK WET GOV. GLENN ADVISES

Tells Anti-Saloon League to Devote Itself Now to the Making of Sentiment.

AND MAKE LAST FIGHT HERE

Even with an Immediate Option Bill, It Would Take Ten Years to "Dry Up" This Town.

Ex-Gov. Robert B. Glenn of North Carolina, who carried the white flag of the Anti-Saloon League through skirmishes for local option in counties and then in cities, and finally to an ultimate conquest in State-wide prohibition, told the members of the New York Anti-Saloon League at a Carnegie Hall mass meeting yesterday that, even if the City Local Option bill should pass the Legislature this session, it would be five years before the first sizable city in the State voted itself dry, and ten years at least before the warfare would begin to tell upon Manhattan. Immediate prohibition he considered as unlikely as an immediate millennium.

Gov. Glenn came to the mass meeting, which was called to create public sentiment in favor of the City Local Option bill, fresh from the Anti-Saloon League's battle grounds of the Middle West and New England. He told from his experiences in these fields how best to save ammunition in the long crusade he feels certain is ahead, and how best to reach the vital spots of the liquor demon as he has seen it jabbed in other centres.

In visiting the North on such an errand Gov. Glenn said he felt that he was only repaying the visit the Northern folks made to the South from 1861 to 1865, and that the fact that he could be here under such a banner meant that the new industrial North and the now fully reconstructed South were prepared unitedly to do battle for a great, new National life founded upon sobriety and in eternal enmity to strong drink.

"Let the making of sentiment be your present business," he said, "and then in five years after you get this law you will have Syracuse and Troy and Rochester going dry.

"And finally, perhaps in ten years or so, when I am on the brink of the grave, you will be able to invite me back here to join with you in celebrating the final rout of strong drink from even this great metropolitan community. But never forget that the way to make New York a city of complete sobriety is to fight your final battle here, not your first battle. First dry all the country roundabout, and then approach your problem here. You will make progress only as you build sentiment. And that takes slow, organized, steady work.

"The brewers have sent out tons of literature," he said, "telling how bad Maine behaves under prohibition, and how the 'speak-easy' thrives there. The Anti-Saloon League, on the other hand, has sent out much literature telling how good the State has grown. I accepted the word of neither, but went up there to have a look into the situation for myself.

"I asked the proprietor of the biggest hotel in town how I could get a drink. He replied that he was a law-abiding man, and I couldn't work one out of him. I said I was dying of thirst and was very ill. He told me to go around the corner, and a guide would meet me and show me the way. I threw up my hands and said I thanked heaven I was in a place at last where I needed a guide to lead me to a drink. Almost everywhere else I had been the people were in need of a guardian to keep them away from it.

"And then I took note of Maine. Of 9,360 murders committed in this country last year, only 3 were committed in Maine. I found the people there owned $114 per capita, while here in your State they own only $20 per capita, and I found that the county poorhouses were almost empty."

In setting forth the basis on which he wished the friends of liquor to meet the drink issue, Gov. Glenn stipulated three declarations he was willing to issue as challenges.

"I dare any man," he said, "to demonstrate that strong drink blesses society, or the home, or the State, and I rest my case on the assertion that it creates 33 per cent. of the country's insanity, 50 per cent. of the disability among veteran soldiers that sends them to the old soldiers' homes, 70 per cent. of the dependents upon institutional charity, 70 per cent. of the criminals in the penitentiaries, 49 per cent. of the idiots and epileptics, and 60 per cent. of the unforunate women of the streets. If strong drink is a friend of yours, to be tolerated by you, why do not you get a drunken barber to shave you of a Saturday night? And why don't you allow drunken engineers to ride upon your railroad trains?

"You can't drink a dollar up and have it to help to pay for the children's shoes. You drink $1 up, and there goes the hat off your head. You drink up $2, and there goes the coat off your back. You drink up $3, and there goes your pants—but I'm not going any further. [Laughter.]

"Better throw a dollar in the fire than spend it for strong drink, for, thrown in the fire, there is the end of it, but put as drink into your miserable stomach, it sends you home to beat your children and whip your wife. If you are a friend of drink, why not hire a drinking chauffeur and turn him loose with your automobile, with your wife and baby in the tonneau, to prove your friendship by your works?

"Before they can meet this issue they must prove that a thing is good which fills a community with poorer and meaner men and paralyzes their earning power for their families and robs their country of their capacity of brain and brawn to help it in the hours of its emergencies."

Gov. Glenn said that when he started the fight against the saloons in Gaston County, Georgia, in 1893 it had thirty-eight Government distilleries, three cotton factories, dirt roads, and no churches. Now it has no distilleries and has exclusively macadam roads, while the cotton factories have increased from three to thirty and employ 15,000 sober people, whose children attend fine public schools and may go to beautiful churches if they wish to—"and they can't get a drop to drink anywhere within the county."

The mass meeting brought to Carnegie Hall an audience which filled the auditorium and the first gallery. Patriotic songs by the United Church choir of 400 voices and solos by the Lotus Glee Club preceded the Governor's speech.

TREATMENT OF DRUNKENNESS

Present Methods Futile—Should Be Reformed, Say Physicians.

Dr. Charles L. Dana, Dr. Edward D. Fisher, and Dr. M. Allen Starr, Professors of Neurology in three of the leading medical colleges of the city, issued a signed statement yesterday setting forth the futility of the present treatment of drunkenness and urging the necessity of special institutions where inebriates may received medical treatment and be given healthful out-of-door work.

The statement says that alcohol presents two problems—one the education of the people as to the injurious effects of alcohol, the other the care of persons who indulge excessively in its use.

The present methods of dealing with alcoholics are said to be crude and futile in results. The alcoholic is sent, the statement says, "to a city hospital, where he is nursed into health and then sent out to drink again, or else he is punished with a fine or a period at the Workhouse, depriving his family of the money needed for its support, and then the man is turned out to resume his habits."

The statement adds that "the Grady-Lee bill now before the Legislature seems to us to be admirably adapted to accomplish these results. The fine for a first offense is to be collected in installments, and the patient is not taken from his work. The punishment for the persistent offender may be accompanied by medical treatment.

"The essential thing is that the plan be carried out by efficient and tactful men. There are 40,000 cases of public drunkenness in this city yearly. Is it not time to do something to help these people, who are not at all affected by the cry that alcohol is a poison?"

THINKS THIS PHILADELPHIA.

Aged Man Whose Memory Has Failed Wouldn't Believe He Was in New York

Archibald Douglas, an aged Philadelphian who loses his memory every now and then and wanders away from home, was in the Night Court last night, firmly convinced that he was in one of the Philadelphia police stations. Douglas was wandering around Cooper Square on Saturday night, apparently dazed, when Policeman Keyes took him in charge. In the old man's pockets were $17 and a passbook in the Fidelity Trust Company of Philadelphia calling for $5,000.

When Douglas was before Magistrate Steinert last night Policeman Keys explained that the prisoner was laboring under the hallucination that he wasn't in New York at all.

"New York, nothing! Why, I am in Philadelphia," exclaimed Douglas, who overheard Keyes.

"No, I don't know it," replied Douglas.

Warden Mallon of the Jefferson Market Prison explained to the Magistrate that Douglas wandered over here once before about a year ago, and on that occasion he learned that Douglas lived at 2344 North Nineteenth Street, Philadelphia, where he had a wife and son. The Warden suggested that Douglas be held until the son could be communicated with.

KINGS' GIFTS TO THE FLEET.

Naval officers to the number of about 100, or their survivors, will shortly receive gifts that have been held up, pending Congressional approval, in a number of cases, for many years. The gifts range all the way from photographs to a great silver flower bowl, the latter of which is a gift of the Mikado of Japan to Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, who was the Commander in Chief of the Atlantic fleet at the time of its memorable visit to Japanese waters. So long have some of these officers been waiting for the approval of Congress that in a number of cases it is quite probable the officer in question will have to refresh his memory as to what is coming to him.

Among the donors whose gifts are affected by the action of Congress are King Edward, Emperor William, President Diaz, the Czar of Russia, the King of Norway, the Mikado of Japan, Prince Henry of Prussia, and numerous Governments and heads of other States.

Some of the officers who will receive gifts are Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla, Rear Admiral Charles H. Davis, Capt. James M. Miller, Capt. Herbert O. Dunn, Chaplain H. I. Reaney, Commander Irvin V. Gillis, and Capt. Richard T. Mulligan. Numerous other officers of lower rank are included in the list.

The gifts were made in token of appreciation of services rendered by the officers in question, as, for example, in the Boxer campaign, in the relief of the Kingston earthquake sufferers, and for courtesies shown the donors in this and their own countries.

CROWDED CAR JUMPS THE ELEVATED TRACK

ITS PASSENGERS PANICKY

Service On the Line Suspended for an Hour and a Half—Injured Mostly Cut by Glass in Getting Out.

Through some unexplained cause the four wheels of the forward truck of the fourth car on a Second Avenue elevated northbound train jumped the track at Thirty-ninth Street, yesterday afternoon, tearing the ties and jolting the middle cars as they were dragged into Forty-second Street station. The accident occurred at 2:25 P. M., when the train, consisting of six cars, was packed with men, women, and children from the east side on their way to the Bronx for an outing.

The front car stopped opposite the ticket office instead of the northern end of the platform. This, added to the grating noise under their feet, created excitement among the foreign-speaking passengers on the train, and several of them were hurt by bits of broken glass in trying to climb out of the windows. Two ambulances were sent from Bellevue Hospital to the scene, but none of the injured persons wished to go there, and they were treated on the spot by Surgeons Russell and Moses. They were:

LIPMAN, MORITZ, 50 years old, watchmaker, 846 First Avenue, both legs cut and bruised.

BROOKS, SARAH, 10 years old, refused address, head cut.

The report of the accident quickly spread and caused a crowd to collect on the uptown platform at Forty-second Second Street, and Capt. Lantry of the East Fifty-first Street Station sent for the reserves from that precinct and the East Thirty-fifth Street Station to keep order. The power was shut off and all train service on the Second Avenue railroad below Ninetieth Street was suspended for an hour and a half while the car was being got off the tracks. The passengers were escorted over the Third Avenue railroad by a special policeman in the employ of the railroad company and passed on to the platforms, but no money was refunded to them. One woman, who may have been looking for heavy damages, became hysterical and sent for her own doctor to come and fetch her away in a taxicab, which he did later. She was not much injured.

George W. Stroms, the motorman, who did not know what had happened, said he had felt a slight vibration just before arriving at the Forty-second Street Station.

Alexander Schieman said that most of the people who had been injured were in the fourth car with him. It was after 4 o'clock when the traffic was resumed on the line.

Three persons who gave their names to the police but were not treated by ambulance surgeons, were Mrs. Bika Bass, 42, of 324 East 102d Street; George Porter, 45, of 621 East Fifteenth Street, and Cecelia Muskegs of 101 Avenue B.

FAILED TO PAY ALIMONY.

It became known yesterday that Supreme Court Justice Mills had signed an order of arrest for contempt against Rufus J. Mulford, formerly prominent in Mount Vernon, for failure to pay his wife, Mrs. Nellie Barclay Mulford, back alimony amounting to $1,600. A short time ago Mrs. Mulford was granted a separation from her husband and alimony of $300 a month.

Alderman George H. Taylor of Mount Vernon, counsel for Mrs. Mulford, has learned that Mulford is now living in Denver, Col., and that he tried in the Supreme Court there to get a divorce from his wife on the ground of cruel and inhuman treatment. This case was dismissed. Now Lawyer Taylor has received another summons against Mrs. Mulford seeking a separation in Denver on the ground of desertion.

Mulford at one time owned a prosperous woolen business on West Eighteenth Street, Manhattan, but when his wife secured a judgment for alimony he sold out his business and went West to escape paying, so Mrs. Mulford alleges.

CARNEGIE HAS GRANDNEPHEW.

He Was Born Yesterday Morning, the Son of George Lauder, Jr.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 20.—The "Stork Special" brought a grand nephew to-day to Andrew Carnegie.

As dawn broke the "stork special"—a one-car train ordered hurriedly by George Lauder, Jr., of this town, hastened from New York to Greenwich at a speed that exceeded records made for a quarter of a century. It bore two New York physicians, who were immediately whirled from the Greenwich station to Mr. Lauder's estate at a rate which far outran the Connecticut speed law limits. The solitary policeman on duty, however, knew its mission, and made no arrest.

At 10 o'clock a fine, healthy boy was born to Mr. and Mrs. Lauder. At present both mother and son are doing well.

HILL DINES JUDGE PARKER.

Musicale Follows at Which Ambassador's Colleagues Are Present.

BERLIN, March 20.—Ambassador and Mrs. David Jayne Hill gave a dinner this evening to Alton B. Parker, the former Democratic Presidential candidate, and Mrs. Parker and Mrs. Daniel Manning of Albany. Among the guests were Prince and Princess von Schönach-Carolath, Vice Admiral von Müller, Chief of the Emperor's private Naval Cabinet, and Mme. von Müller, and the American Consul General at Dresden, T. S. Gaffney.

COPENHAGEN, March 20.—The Scandinavian-American Line steamer United States, from Copenhagen March 10, for New York, which went aground off Christiania on March 12, was refloated to-day. She proceeded to Horton, on the Christiania fjord, for examination. She is not believed to have been seriously damaged.

CELLULOID WATCH CRYSTALS.

Many Advantages Alleged for Latest Substitute for Glass.

Celluloid watch crystals have appeared in the Maiden Lane district, and are guaranteed not to break like those of glass. The celluloid crystals are not favored by dealers in the higher grades of watches, but are placed on cheap timepieces.

In objecting to the innovation conservative dealers say that in thin watches the cases are elastic, and if the crystal also bends, as celluloid does, there is likely to be interference with the hands, causing the watch to run behind.

Another objection is that celluloid contains acid which will rust the steel and coat brass parts with verdigris. A third is that celluloid is imflammable.

One manufacturer said that there has been much experimenting to obtain celluloid suitable for crystals. As far back as twenty-five years ago, he said, he had a watch crystal made of the material, but after that the manufacturers ceased to make this use of celluloid.

Of late, the German manufacturers have been reviving the use of these crystals. They cost a little more than glass, but are liked because of their durability.

If You Are a Wholesale Merchant or a Manufacturer Carrying Stock in a Loft Building in New York City

there is a serious and unnecessary leak going on in your business. When a shipment of either finished goods or raw material is made you, you have to truck the goods from the railroad terminal to your loft—pay for loading the truck, cost of transit, loading the goods on an elevator, and running the elevator up to your floor. When you reship to fill your orders, you have to pay for the same thing over again—loading the truck at your door, trucking the shipment to the terminal of the railroad, unloading the truck—and you pay five cents a hundred or more for this EACH WAY.

They are Eating Your Money

The railroads are perfectly willing to deliver these same goods to you without charge ON AN ELEVATOR AT THE VERY floor of the loft you occupy, provided your loft is in the right place—in the Bush Terminal. Look at your cartage bills for the last year NOW. The sum will be large—the cost for 1910 will be far greater, for you are receiving and shipping more goods. Is it worth the cost of a postal card to SAVE this amount?

The big, brainy merchants and manufacturers who have been graduated from your situation to occupy space in the BUSH Terminal say that their shipments GET ON THE CAR WHEELS—get going—without the delays to which YOUR shipments are now subject through the congestion of the city streets.

What are you paying for insurance? $1.75 or $4.25? Well, how would you like to pay 20 cents, or even 10 cents instead? That is what merchants at the Bush Terminal are paying. Get out a pencil and figure up the saving for you in a year on this one item alone. Wouldn't it be $12,000, or perhaps even $16,000? Isn't that quite a saving to make on ONE ITEM?

The BUSH TERMINAL can save you thousands of dollars yearly—can increase your volume of business with your present equipment, increase the efficiency of your men—SAVE you money in several ways and MAKE you money. Drop us a postal—we will show you HOW.

FOR PUBLIC CONTROL OF WIRE CONCERNS

Committee Favors Putting Telegraph and Telephone Companies Under Service Board.

THE REPORT IS UNANIMOUS

Issue of Securities to be Regulated Only When Proceeds Are to be Expended in This State.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 20.—By a unanimous report the special legislative committee appointed last year to investigate telephone and telegraph companies urges that such corporations in this State be placed under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission of the Second District. The report will be transmitted to the Legislature to-morrow night by the Chairman of the special committee, Senator George A. Davis of Erie. The committee says:

> The State is already committed to the policy of controlling and regulating public service corporations. If the power of supervision is extended to the entire system and finances of a corporation operating in this State and throughout the United States, the commission would be required to have a system of inspection extending beyond the boundaries of New York State. Without such power a commission representing this State cannot pass upon issues of capital stock securities, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used in the development of properties beyond the borders of this State. The committee believes that the commission should have power to regulate rates and services, and the merger of telephone and telegraph companies within this State, and the issue of capital stock securities, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used in extensions and betterments to property in this State.
> The general tangible property operated by telephone and telegraph companies, and of the devices employed by them in carrying on their business, the relation of the business to the principal business centres, the necessity for complete systems of intercommunication between the various places of importance renders impracticable the division of the State into districts so far as concerns the regulation of these corporations. The division of responsibility for such regulation between two commissions, as is properly done in regard to other public service corporations, seems as to these corporations impracticable and unwise.
>
> Your committee recommends the passing of a law which will give to one of the existing Public Service Commissions of this State jurisdiction over and supervision of telegraph and telephone companies, and telephone and telegraph lines, rates, service, and finances; and in view of the fact that the location of the office of the Public Service Commission of the Second District is in Albany, the State capital, and in view of the fact that this point is nearer the geographic and commercial centre of the State, your committee recommends that such jurisdiction and supervision be given to the Public Service Commission of the Second District. A further reason for giving such control to the Public Service Commission of the Second District is that it will be more economical in that there will be needed in that office only one bureau of telegraphs and telephones, and only one corps of inspectors, engineers, and statisticians looking after the detail of this work.

Power to Maintain Branch Offices.

The committee recommends also that the law provide that the Second District Commission receive authority to hold public hearings in any part of the State, and that it be authorized, in its discretion, to maintain a branch office in any city of the first or second class.

It is further recommended by the committee that "there be exempted from the jurisdiction of the commission all companies, associations, joint stock companies, partnerships, and individuals which are not conducted or organized for the purpose of conducting the business for profit, and that the commission shall be given power in its discretion to exempt any other company, partnership, or individual engaged in the telephone or telegraph business from the necessity of reporting to the commission."

The committee reviews the history of the telegraph and telephone business in this State and presents tables showing the dividends which the corporations have paid in the last few years. The telegraph business, as appears from the evidence taken before the committee, is operated or controlled by two companies, the Western Union and Postal. The report continues:

> There is some evidence that about 80 per cent. of the business of the country is competitive and 20 per cent. non-competitive, and that the Postal system does about 50 per cent. of the competitive business, or 40 per cent. of the whole. It also appears conclusively that the price of messages within the State of New York, as to a large portion of the State, was raised about three years ago, so that many private and commercial mesages formerly costing 25 cents for ten words now cost 35 and 40 cents. It also appears that the rate charged for messages was increased by the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Postal companies at the same time, not as the result of any contract, so far as the committee has been able to learn, but the increase was made after a conference and consultation between representatives of the different companies who have charge of the making of rates, so that if there was no agreement between the companies to raise the rates for telegraphing at the same time and to the same amount, there was at least an understanding between the representatives of the respective companies amounting to what is commonly known as a "gentlemen's agreement," and this understanding has been and is being faithfully carried out by both companies.
>
> The only competition between the two telegraph systems consists of a mutual strife to obtain an increase in the volume of their business by increasing the efficiency of their service.

History of Telephone Business.

The various steps in the formation of the present telephone systems are described by the committee, dating back to 1877, when the telephone became a device of commercial importance. The original companies were the New England and Bell corporations. Later these companies combined, and rights to the Bell patents were sold to smaller companies operating in various localities. In the case of the New York territory the New York Telephone Company or its predecessor acquired the whole of the business of Manhattan Island and of all other territory within thirty miles of the City Hall which lay north of the East River and east of the Hudson River. The New York and New Jersey Company acquired, in addition to a large part of New Jersey, all of Long Island and Staten Island.

The Buffalo Bell Company was one of the early subsidiary companies, and its capital was increased from time to time from $30,000 to $10,000,000. In 1909 it was acquired by the New York Telephone Company, its shareholders receiving 93½ per cent. of the par value of its stock. In granting licenses to local companies the Bell corportion took a portion of the stock and made a contract for about 4½ per cent. of the gross receipts of the operating company. As the business expanded more capital was needed, and this was generally supplied by the Bell or American company.

In 1909 the Bell system, so far as it effects this State; the Empire State Company, the Central New York Company, the Hudson River Company, the New York Company, and the New York and New Jersey Company were brought together in a practical consolidation, so that at present practically the whole Bell system of telephone exchanges and toll lines within the State is owned by the New York Telephone Company. The long-distance lines are owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. The report continues:

> The entire capital stock of the New York Telephone Company is owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and in the same hands rests the control of the Empire City subways, owned by the Empire City Subway Company, a corporation appearing to have the exclusive right to build conduits and wire ducts underneath the streets in the City of New York, and through this exclusive right, or very largely through this exclusive right, the New York Telephone Company maintains an absolute monopoly of the telephone business of New York City.
> The American Telephone and Telegraph Company also, by being the largest individual owner of stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company, has control of that company. The earnings of the New York Telephone Company have in the past been very large, and will undoubtedly continue to be large so far as the New York City investment is concerned. Some parts of the Bell system within the State have in the past yielded little, if any, profit, and some parts of it have doubtless been operated at a loss.

Speaking of the opposition telephone business, the committee says that several companies have sprung up throughout the State, held together by a contract which prohibits the interchange of business with the Bell Company without the consent of the other parties to the contract. These companies are called independent corporations, and claim to be doing business in opposition to a monopoly, but the committee declares it is clear that the parties back of these companies are seeking to build up one monopoly to take the place of another.

FOR ECONOMY IN CHARITY.

State Fiscal Supervisor's Report Outlines Proposed Reforms.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 20.—In his annual report to the Legislature, Dennis McCarthy, Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, calls attention to the inauguration of a policy of co-operation for solving the problems of economical administration in the State institutions reporting to him.

He has undertaken, he says, among other things, to extend the contract system for the purchase of supplies, making it possible eventually by this method to cover practically all purchases for the seventeen institutions of which his department has the supervision—institutions which cost the State for maintenance about $2,000,000 in round figures annually.

Mr. McCarthy adds that a conference of the Boards of Managers has adopted recommendations calling for an auditor of accounts, whose duty it shall be to examine the books, papers, and accounts of all institutions; a purchasing agent, who shall assist the Purchasing Committee in standardizing the goods used by the State institutions; a supervisor of farms, who, as the term implies, shall supervise the work of the various institution farms with a view to making them more profitable, and a supervisor of foods, whose duty shall be to study the needs of the inmates of the various classes of institutions and make necessary revisions in the dietary.

It is also recommended that the law which now allows each institution a flat sum of $250 as contingent fund—whether the institution has 100 or 2,000 inmates—be changed so as to provide an allowance of $1 per capita in institutions having a population of more than 250, leaving the allowance as it is in institutions with a population of 250 or less. Legislation is now pending to make the foregoing effective.

It is added that the Commissioner of Agriculture has undertaken to provide for the regular and frequent analyses of food products used in the institutions, while the Commissioner of Health has recommended changes in the health law to provide for the frequent inspection of the water and sewerage systems of the State institutions in the Fiscal Supervisor's group.

WEEK TO END ALLDS INQUIRY.

Last of Evidence To-morrow to be Followed by Counsels' Arguments.

ALBANY, March 20.—The close of the Senate bribery investigation, after several disappointed expectations of an earlier end, is now definitely scheduled for the coming week. The seventh week of the inquiry into Senator Conger's charges against Senator Allds will open Tuesday morning, and the Senate hopes to hear the few remaining shreds of evidence and the summing up of the defense on that day.

Attorney Lewis E. Carr of Albany, who conducted the cross-examination of Senator Conger, will begin the final argument for Allds, and the plan is to have Martin W. Littleton of New York conclude. Judge Augustus Van Wyck of New York will probably open the closing speeches for Conger on Wednesday and James W. Osborne will close that side.

According to last week's decision, the Senate will postpone a vote on sustaining Conger's charges until Tuesday of the week following. This will give the members five days in which to review the evidence that has been placed in their desks each day in typewritten form as the trial has progressed.

JAILED, EXPIRES IN CELL.

Electrician, Arrested for Drunkenness, May Have Had Skull Fracture.

Half an hour after he had been placed in a cell in the West Thirtieth Street Station yesterday morning Charles W. Raymond, 642 Sixth Avenue, became ill and died. He had been arrested, charged with intoxication, and the police think he may have been suffering from a depressed fracture of the skull.

Raymond was an electrician, and boarded with Mrs. Julia Koch, who said that he had been in bad health recently. She said he was well off financially, because of a large sum of money bequeathed him by a relative.

ANIMAL RESCUERS MOVE EASTWARD

Bide-a-Wee Home Near Rockefeller Institute, but Won't Pay for Pets in Competition.

GOES TO NEW QUARTERS

Where There Are No Neighbors to Complain of Barking Dogs and Mewing Cats—Receives a $2,000 Gift.

The Bide-a-Wee Home, the institution maintained by a number of prominent New York women for the care of homeless dogs and cats, and which has been for the last three years at 36 Lexington Avenue, will move this week to pleasanter and more commodious quarters at 244 East Sixty-fifth Street. The news created lively interest throughout the upper east side yesterday, because the rumor had gone forth that the society was going to compete in the purchase of cats and dogs with the Rockefeller Institute, which happens to be only a couple of blocks away, at the foot of East Sixty-sixth Street.

Every boy on the upper east side knows, or is supposed to know, that the Rockefeller Institute pays as much as 25 cents a head for dogs and half that price for cats. Some unusually fine dogs bring 50 cents. The animals are used at the institute for experiments in vivisection. Most of the members of the Bide-a-Wee Home Society are naturally not in sympathy with the institute methods. There was a report yesterday that the Bide-a-Wee people intended to pay 30 cents a head for dogs, and 5 cents more than the institute price for tabbies. This set the young financiers in the district figuring on how much it would be possible to make a week. There were visions that the rival institutions might, in their eagerness to get the better of each other, offer even fabulous prices.

But Mrs. Harry Ulysses Kibbe, President of the Bide-a-Wee Home, denied last night that any desire to enter into competition with the Rockefeller Institute was the reason for the selection of the site of the new home. The location was better than the present, she said. The society had far outgrown its Lexington Avenue domicile, and its officers were now ready to carry out a long contemplated plan of enlarging the scope of their work. Hereafter, the President explained, the Bide-a-Wee institution will be conducted along somewhat similar lines to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. As soon as they are established in their new quarters they will form clubs among the boys of the neighborhood who will be taught to be kind to defenseless animals. Buttons, like the present S. P. C. A. buttons, will be distributed and medals will be offered as a reward for kindness. Several women connected with the institution have already volunteered to act as lecturers, and it is probable that regular assembly rooms, where lectures will be given several times a week will be established.

The animal house is a two-story and attic frame house that a hundred years ago was a mansion. It contains thirteen rooms, and there is a large yard and barn. Workmen have been remodeling the structure for the last month, and it will be ready for occupancy some time this week. Already new wire cages have been installed. A wooden stairway has been built from the upper floor to the yard for the dogs, and it is expected that double the number of cats and dogs now being cared for by the society will be accommodated. There will be regular wards and many innovations.

Before long, Mrs. Kibbe explained, if the society continued to flourish as it has done, there will be a department for horses, which will be taken care of just the same as the dogs and cats are now, and, like the latter, many will be sent to the society's country home at Harrington Park, N. J.

The Sixty-fifth Street house is an ideal situation for an animal hospital. Surrounding the house is a plot of ground 50 by 100 feet. The place was primarily selected because it offered little chance for neighbors to complain of noise, as they have before. It is on the south side of the street, between Second and Third Avenues. Adjoining the house on one side is an express office, and on the other a blacksmith's shop. In the rear are stables. Directly across the street and taking up the whole block is the Third Avenue Elevated Railway power house. Even the strongest-lunged tomcat or the most obstreperous wolf hound will be able to make as much noise as it likes without a protest from any direction.

The house is owned by Thomas Lowndes, a coal dealer at 206 East Sixty-fifth Street. Mr. Lowndes is entirely in sympathy with the purposes of the Bide-a-Wee Home, as he is an amateur dog fancier. He has agreed to fix the place up so that the animals will have every comfort. He even repapered the rooms and erected a nice new fence around the front yard. Offices will be fitted up on the ground floor, and a veterinarian will always be on the premises.

Mrs. Kibbe was enthusiastic about the new home when she talked yesterday with a reporter. She said the society had long needed more commodious quarters, and having at last obtained them a new régime in the matter of the care of homeless and friendless cats and dogs will begin.

"The society long ago outgrew its Lexington Avenue quarters," said Mrs. Kibbe, "and we have been looking for just such a home as we now have at last. We will be able now to go ahead with many reforms. In the first place we will be able to take cars of double the number of animals and give them better attention, too. The new surroundings will be almost like the country. The large yard in the rear will enable the animals to have plenty of air and exercise, and inside there will be plenty of room for the cages. We will have regular wards, just as in a regular hospital, and a medical superintendent will be always on the premises. He is Dr. F. A. Campbell, who has long been the society's veterinary.

"One of the first innovations will be the organization of clubs among the boys of the neighborhood. There will be regular classes, and the pupils will be taught to show kindness to dumb animals. Many of the women connected with the society have already volunteered to give lectures to these boys. We expect to have a society pin, and every year medals will be awarded to the boys for special acts of kindness. We expect to do a whole lot of good in the neighborhood—more than we could do in the Lexington Avenue surroundings.

"There is no especial significance in our moving so near the Rockefeller Institute, but of course, being in the neighborhood, we expect to exert a more or less wholesome effect. The new city establishment will in no wise affect the country farm we maintain at Harrington Park, N. J. That will continue to be our out-of-town farm where we will continue to send our sick charges. We have 200 animals at the country home at present. The new city home will accommodate at least 200 animals. The large stable in the rear will be used for large dogs.

"The home is in a better condition financially than it has ever been. Only ten days ago a lady gave us $2,000, which is just sufficient to pay the last mortgage on the Harrington Park property. That is now free from encumbrances. This donation is really what made it possible for us to establish new city quarters. After we are well established in our new home, the next step will be to make arrangements for the care of horses. It will take some time, however, to carry out this plan."

The Bide-a-Wee Home was started seven years ago. Last year the institution sheltered 5,000 cats and dogs. More than 4,000 cats and dogs were placed in homes. Many prominent New York women are interested in the society. Among its officers are Mrs. William Sakee Hofstra, Mrs. George Gould, Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, and Mrs. George Washington Tomes. The Secretary is Miss Ethel Champion. Last year, as the result of complaints regarding the noise made by the animals, the Board of Health ordered the dogs to be removed from the Lexington Avenue house. The Harrington Park home was then established.

"PURGE PARTY," SAYS FORT.

Good to Clean House Occasionally, Governor Declares at House Warming.

Gov. Fort of New Jersey was guest of honor on Saturday night at the opening of the handsome new home of the recently organized Union League Club of Bergen County in Hackensack.

More than 800 representative Republicans were present and applauded Gov. Fort's speech, during which he said:

"No doubt all have been interested in the troubles in the Republican Party at Albany and at Washington, but such things do not discourage me in the least, for I have always believed that when the Republican Party purges itself of anything wrong it is a good thing for the party in the end.

"As a result of this contest at Washington and of the investigation at Albany and the correction of any evils there may be in New Jersey we will have a better day, a stronger party, a party with a purpose and a Republicanism that will serve the best interests of the people.

"It would be better if the newspapers in this country devoted as much space to the proceedings of Congress as do the British papers to the proceedings in Parliament. It would be well for our people to know and keep in touch with the doings at Washington, to know who the men are in Congress, to be able to measure them up and to educate themselves as to public affairs. The Congressional records ought to be published fully in all the papers."

With Gov. Fort were Senator E. W. Wakelee and Vivian Lewis, candidate for Governor; Col. Austin Colgate, the Governor's aid; Speaker Harry P. Ward of the New Jersey Assembly, Assemblyman Walter Edge, majority leader of the Assembly; Assemblyman Joseph H. Scharf, and Assemblyman Moore of Passaic.

The new club, which has a membership of 325, has a house that is one of the best equipped in the State. The women's reception on Saturday afternoon was well attended.

DUTCH IMMIGRATING TO WESTERN FARMS

One Hundred Well-Built Peasants with Their Families Arrive, Bound for Minnesota.

PASTOR URGED MOVEMENT

Through Bishop McGoldrick's Efforts, the Best Immigrants Seen Here in Years Come on the Lapland.

Some 100 sturdy Dutch men, women, and children arrived yesterday on the Red Star liner Lapland, and to-day they are speeding West in a special train. They are bound for Otter Tail County, Minn., where they are to settle on farm lands. Some of the men brought their farm implements with them, and all have money for part payment on land and for their start in the New World. There were some large families among the settlers. Peter von der Kolk and his wife brought over seven children. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Elsen brought eleven children. In addition to his wife and five children, Cornelius Brouwers brought in Piet, a sheep dog, and a broad Dutch farm wagon.

The arrival of the Dutchmen is said to be the result of a "back to the earth" movement conducted by Bishop McGoldrick of the Catholic diocese of Duluth. He has been advocating the settlement of the farm lands of Minnesota, and conferred with Father Van Der Huevel to interest Dutch farmers in the movement. He returned on the Lapland, and with the party were four other priests. The plan of settlement has been in contemplation for some time and the land company here has had a force at work clearing the land to be occupied.

The immigration officials said the newcomers were as fine a class of aliens as any that had come to this country in a body in years. Most of them were well equipped with money, and all were pronounced strong and healthy by the examining physicians.

The immigrants are traveling across the continent in what is practically a special train. There are sufficient tourist cars and a smoking car. Two baggage cars were necessary to carry the luggage and implements. Many regrets were expressed by some that they had to dispose of their live stock before sailing.

TO IMPROVE LIABILITY LAWS.

Civic Federation Drafts a Plan to Give Better Compensation.

A committee of the National Civic Federation is now at work considering a more comprehensive system for compensation in industrial accidents. Its Chairman is August Belmont, and in his absence in Europe the work is under the direction of Colgate Hoyt, the banker and broker, and Otto M. Eidlitz of the Building Trades Employers' Association of this city. It has also been proposed that actuaries should be employed to collect statistics and make an estimate of the way in which the schemes now in operation in other countries would work under American conditions.

A third committee was named to consider the necessity of adequate and efficient factory inspection and to suggest a comprehensive plan for uniform State legislation on the qualifications and training of factory inspectors.

URGES NEGROES TO ABSTAIN.

Dr. Washington Praises Work of Y. W. C. A. for Temperance.

Booker T. Washington of the Tuskegee Institute delivered an address yesterday afternoon at the African Methodist Episcopal Church in West Twenty-fifth Street on the work done in the cause of temperance by the Young Women's Christian Association.

Dr. Washington pointed out the need for enlarging the scope of the association among colored people in New York, and urged those present to do all in their power to obtain sufficient funds to erect a new building, which is badly needed to further the work.

TELEPHONE Your Order for EASTER FLOWERS

"More than half of our orders are received by telephone," says a well-known Fifth Avenue florist.

"I cannot imagine doing business without telephone service. One of our young ladies devotes her entire time to handling telephone orders, and we are making a special effort to please our telephone customers. It would be poor business not to do so. Every up-to-date business house now recognizes the importance of telephone trade, and knows that telephone orders must receive prompt attention.

"Easter is the season for flowers, and it is always a busy time for us. I expect that this week telephone calls will be coming in faster than ever, and I have made special preparations in order that such calls may receive proper attention."

The florist is right. Easter is the season for flowers, so when you are making Easter eggs and bunnies for the little folk, do not forget Easter flowers for grown-ups. Just telephone the florist. He will aid you in your selection and deliver the flowers promptly.

Not only in ordering flowers, but in a hundred other ways the telephone demonstrates its usefulness.

SEARING DEPOSITORS DISCUSS SETTLEMENT

Meantime District Attorney Has Been Asked to Look Into Charges They Make.

CASH TAKEN ON FAILURE EVE

One Woman Says the Teller Persuaded Her to Accept a Certified Check in Lieu of Cash, and It's Useless.

As a result of two crowded and excited meetings of the 1,000 small depositors of Searing & Co., the private bankers who failed for nearly half a million dollars two months ago, a settlement between the depositors and individual members of the firm may soon be reached. Emanuel Hertz, representing the "Depositors' Association," will meet John B. Stanchfield, Searing's lawyer, this morning, and put up the following proposal to him:

> Depositors of $25 or less shall receive in cash the entire amount due them. Depositors of $100 or less shall receive in cash half what is due them, and shall receive the balance of what is due them in one-year notes secured by proper indorsements of banking firms, surety companies, or financially sound individuals. Depositors of over $100 shall receive in cash one-quarter of the amount due them, and the balance in one-year notes indorsed in the same financial way.

This will be submitted to the firm as a counter-proposal to one which Mr. Stanchfield for Searing made to Lawyer Hertz of the creditors last week. Stanchfield's was identical with the counter-proposal, except that the notes to be given by Searing in settlement were to be two-year notes and were to be secured by liens on the unfinished Delaware & Erie Railroad, which the Searing firm has been trying to build for some time and which has been said to be one of the causes of the failure.

It was the discussion of whether or not the depositors should accept these liens on the unfinished railroad as safe collateral which caused the two meetings of the depositors to become so excited and prolonged. One of the meetings was held in Osterman's Hall on Saturday night and was attended by the creditors of the Eighth Avenue branch. The creditors of the Wendover Avenue branch met yesterday morning in the Bronx Theatre.

Among the Afflicted.

Michael Batavia, who lost $1,552 of his savings in the Searing crash, presided at the latter meeting, and Jacob Reibman, who lost $1,700, was Secretary. A stunned and pathetic figure among the gathering depositors was middle-aged Fannie Saltzman, a poor baker's wife. While the meeting was in progress she would go from group to group with a dazed air.

"But a certified check. I always thought a certified check was as good as the cash," she kept saying. Until a few days before the failure she had $900—the savings of all her married life—deposited in Searing's Wendover branch. On the Friday before the failure she went up to the bank with her sister, Mrs. Tannenbaum. She wanted to draw $600 from her account.

"What do you want to draw $600 out for?" she says the teller asked her. This was six days before the failure. Mrs. Saltzman said she was going to give the $600 to her sister, who would put it in a downtown savings bank, where it would draw 4 per cent. interest.

"If you take it downtown some one will steal it from you, and we will pay your sister 4½ per cent. if she leaves it here in our savings department," she says the teller told her. Mrs. Tannenbaum, Mrs. Saltzman's sister, was persuaded to leave the $600 in the bank which was about to fail. The teller, she declares, transferred the $600 to her name and gave her a savings bank book for it. On Monday, three days before the failure, the poor baker's wife visited the bank again.

"I want to draw out my $300," she said to the teller. "I want to give my lawyer, Mr. Lubekin, $600 to buy a mortgage with."

"You'd better not withdraw your account. You can't buy a mortgage of $600 with only $300," she says he replied.

"Oh, but I've got another $300 right here in my bag," said the baker's wife, patting her reticule triumphantly, quite proud of being able to show how prosperous she was.

"You'll lose that money if you take it downtown with you," she declares he advised her. "Give me the $300 which is in your bag. I'll give you a certified check for the $600, and you can take it to your lawyer. A certified check is as good as cash, you know. Your lawyer will find it much more convenient to handle."

Parted With Her Money.

So, Mrs. Saltzman relates, she took the $300 out of her bag and gave it to the teller. He gave her a certified check for $600. She took the check to Lawyer Lubekin, and he deposited it with his own bank for collection that same afternoon. It was sent up to Searing & Co.'s Wendover Branch on Wednesday. The bank officials told the messenger that they were short of cash, but would pay it on the following day. On the following day they continued to receive deposits. They evaded paying this and other checks, however. Late Thursday afternoon the news spread that the bank was receiving money, but not paying out any. A run started and the bank closed its doors. Lawyer Hertz said yesterday that he had twenty cases in which depositors seemed to have cases for criminal action. He has turned them over to Special Assistant District Attorney E. Crosby Kindelberger to investigate under Section 295 of the Penal Code.

"If so many poor people were not involved in the failure Searing and his aids would have been indicted long ago," said Lawyer Hertz after the meeting. "But if they are indicted and imprisoned the poor depositors will lose everything. Searing has wealthy friends. His father is the President of a trust company in New Jersey."

Searing & Co.'s Wall Street headquarters were described by Lawyer Hertz yesterday as merely a "shell." It had only eight depositors, he said. All the business was done among the petty tradesmen of the west side, Harlem, and the Bronx. There will be a meeting of the Westchester Branch's depositors at Tietjen's Hall, Boston Road and 180th Street, to-morrow night. Mr. Hertz represents 350 out of about 900 depositors. The depositors have lost $90,000 in the failure and the railroads about $400,000 in the Searing crash, Mr. Hertz yesterday said.

FOR MILITARY USES ONLY.

New Jersey to Introduce Law Barring Armories to Civil Gatherings.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, March 20.—Declaring that New Jersey has no law which requires armories to be used exclusively for military purposes, Adjt. Gen. Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., has received from the War Department a circular letter calling attention to the fact, and suggesting that State legislation be initiated against any use of armories excepting the purposes for which they were built and equipped. It is the purpose of the department to close the gates of armories to exhibitions, conventions, political meetings, fairs, charity balls, &c.

The Government realizes that those in charge of armories have pressure brought to bear upon them to open the buildings for fairs, charity balls, and athletic events, &c., and that they should have some protection in order that they may say "No," and have a law to back them up. This is what the War Department wants, as it suggests to the Adjutant Generals of the various States that the work of the Guard is being harmed by the constant use of State armories for other purposes than that for which they were erected and equipped.

In New York armories may be used by veteran organizations if allowed by the authorities, but not for political purposes, and in the State of Washington the same condition prevails as in New York. The War Department suggests to Adjt. Gen. Sadler that this matter be taken up.

FOUND TIED IN A COAL BIN.

Girl Robbed and Left Unconscious in an East Side Cellar.

The police are trying hard to find a young man, supposed to be an Italian, who last night attacked, bound, and robbed Katie Wagner, 17 years old, in the cellar of her home at 872 East 127th Street, and left her unconscious in a coal bin after robbing her of her diamond engagement ring. Katie's mother is janitress at the East 127th Street house. The young girl is very pretty and is quite popular in the neighborhood.

Wishing to help her mother, Katie went into the cellar last night to feed the furnace. She was preparing to fill a scuttle with coal when the Italian grabbed her, she says, pinioning her arms behind her. Katie's screams were half stifled when the man's fingers closed around her throat. A moment later she lost consciousness.

Her screams were heard, however, by Annie McGann, who lives on the second floor, and who was on the street near the stoop. Annie did not respond at once, but after thinking the matter over a few minutes she went down into the cellar calling Katie's name. There was no answer, but a man rushed by her and escaped through an open window in the rear, vaulted over the back yard fence, and disappeared. The light in the cellar was so dim Annie could not tell what the man looked like. She struck a light, she says, and saw Katie lying unconscious on the coal. A rope was tied about her feet and her hands were tied behind her. Annie gave the alarm, and shortly afterward Dr. Baker of the Lincoln Hospital arrived. He soon revived the girl, whose only injury was shock and several bruises on her wrists.

On the cellar floor was found a gold brooch which her assailant had evidently dropped in his flight. Her engagement ring was gone. After telling the story of her experience, Katie said that the man who attacked her was apparently about 25 years old, five feet seven inches in height, and had a black mustache. He wore a dark suit and a black slouch hat. She says she is sure he was an Italian.

ENGINE KILLS FIREMEN'S PET.

"Abie," a Terrier, Got in Front of No. 131's Wheels at a Corner.

While bound for a small fire at 425 Osborn Street, Brownsville, yesterday afternoon, Engine 131, whose quarters are in Watkins Street, ran over and killed the firemen's pet terrier Abie. The dog was running ahead of the engine, but when it wheeled from Pitkin Avenue into Osborn Street he slackened his pace and a front wheel struck him.

Driver "Bill" Dunn threw his horses onto their haunches in an effort to save the dog. While the engine passed on, one fireman left it to pick up Abie. The little dog died while he held it a few minutes later.

Abie, after a career as a tramp in the streets, joined the force of his own accord two years ago. Some time ago he accompanied firemen into a burning building in New Jersey Avenue, East New York, and rescued a new-born puppy. Abie was allowed to adopt it, and it still lives at the engine house.

KICKED HIS OWN KNEECAP.

When the Cunarder Mauretania sails on Wednesday she will make the trip without one of her best firemen. Michael Boyle, head fireman of the vessel, kicked himself on his left knee yesterday, landing himself in hospital.

Yesterday afternoon Boyle went up to visit friends near Van Cortlandt Park. In the afternoon a discussion as to the relative merits of the American game of football as compared with the English game of Rugby came up, and Boyle's friends took him over to the Van Cortlandt Park grounds to show him the difference. Boyle was showing how to kick the ball. On his first attempt he caught it with the side of his right foot with a "side-swipe." The ball was heavy and Boyle's right foot struck the kneecap of his left.

In Fordham Hospital Boyle's kneecap was cased in plaster. It will be several days before he will be able to walk.

French Liners for Buenos Ayres.

The French liner Touraine, which arrived yesterday from Havre, brought news, according to Paul Faguet, General Agent of the line, of a new enterprise of the line. An express service is to be established between Bordeaux and Buenos Ayres. Two steamships of the Provence type are to be put on the run. Mr. Faguet said that there ought to be as much business between Bordeaux and Buenos Ayres as between Europe and Boston.

ROMANTIC MR. JARCKY UPSET A TENEMENT

His Sweetheart Thought for a Time He Had Killed Her, but the Cartridges Were Blank.

HER AUNT YELLED FIRE

And That Brought the Engines and Police—Her Uncle Had Objected to Jarcky's Long, Sympathetic Strike.

A disappointed young man and a revolver loaded with blank cartridges caused much excitement yesterday in the flat of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Divinoff, at 305 East Ninety-ninth Street. Before it had simmered down the Police and Fire Departments had been called upon for help, and almost every one in the neighborhood turned out to see what it was all about.

Annie Beison, a young shirtwaist maker, is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Divinoff, and lives in their flat. For a long time Louis Jarcky, a painter, has been courting her. Their matrimonial plans were progressing nicely when along came the shirtwaist strike, and Miss Beison was out of a job. Just to show that he was a dyed-in-the-wool union man and one who believed in sympathetic strikes, young Jarcky struck also. He refused to go back to work until the striking shirtwaist makers were all reinstated.

Yesterday afternoon Jarcky called as usual to see Miss Beison. They were chatting in the front room when Mr. Divinoff came in and joined in the conversation. Soon the subject drifted to strikes, and the shirtwaist strike in particular. Mr. Divinoff did not approve of young Jarcky's sympathetic strike at all, and told him so. The discussion grew warm. Finally Mr. Divinoff exclaimed:

"Well, I'll just tell you one thing. A young man who acts as you have is no fit husband for my niece, so you had better give up the idea of every marrying her."

This was a crushing blow to Jarcky. He went into an adjoining room to think it over, and a few minutes later was joined there by Miss Beison.

"One thing is sure," said Jarcky. "If I can't marry you and can't be near you here, we will go to a place where we can be together all the time."

Before Miss Beison could grasp what he meant, Jarcky drew a revolver, backed off a few feet, and fired point blank at the girl. She screamed and threw up her hands. Jarcky fired again, and Miss Beison fell to the floor, screaming that she was dying.

Mr. Divinoff ran into the room just as Jarcky pointed the revolver at his own forehead. They grappled and fell struggling to the floor. The revolver fell from Jarcky's hand. Although Mr. Divinoff is far heavier than the young painter, the latter was nearly his match. They fought all over the floor, overturning chairs and jarring down several pictures from the walls.

At the sound of the first shot Mrs. Divinoff ran to the front window, and, poking her head as far out as she could, began to yell:

"He's firing!" She repeated this many times.

Just across the street from the Divinoff flat is one of the gashouses of the Consolidated Gas Company. The watchman there heard Mrs. Divinoff and thought she was yelling "Fire!" Without waiting to investigate, he turned in a fire alarm. In a few minutes the engines began to arrive. But the firemen saw no evidences of a fire anywhere. Mrs. Divinoff had withdrawn her head from the window. While the firemen were standing around wondering what to do about it, some one ran downstairs from No. 305 and explained that it was a policeman, not a fireman, who was needed.

Policeman Rowley of the East 104th Street Police Station came along, and he ran to the Divinoff flat. Mr. Divinoff had finally conquered Jarcky and was sitting on his chest. Jarcky was taken to the police station, along with the revolver. There it was inspected by the desk Sergeant.

"Why, this thing is loaded with blanks," said the Sergeant. Mr. Divinoff hastened back home to tell his niece that she wasn't shot at all. Such proved to be the case, for just after her uncle had started for the station house Miss Beison and her aunt discovered that the only damage was a smell of burned powder and the broken chairs.

THREE HELD AS HIGHWAYMEN.

Charged with robbery Sam Sacco and Tony Sicare of 336 East 109th Street and Tony Diluca of 2,125 Second Avenue were held for examination on Tuesday by Magistrate Barlow in the Harlem Court yesterday on complaint of Benjamin Zuckerman of 1,536 First Avenue, and Isidore Berger of 233 East 155th Street, who said the prisoners held them up with revolvers on Saturday night, taking $12 from Zuckerman and $1 and a few cents and a gold ring from Berger.

Zuckerman said that he and Berger were on their way home and were passing a vacant lot at 110th Street and First Avenue, when Sacco, Sicare, and Diluca attacked and robbed them.

After the three fled Zuckerman and Berger met Detectives Meancy and Schlessinger of the East 104th Street Station, to whom they told their story, and who soon arrested the three men.

At the East 104th Street Station Sacco and Sicare were suspected of robbing Henry Hellman of 591 East 140th Street last Wednesday night at the same place and in the same manner as Zuckerman and Berger were held up, and in court yesterday Hellman positively identified them as his assailants.

DECIDE SLAYER'S FATE TO-DAY

Friends of Jesse Ullman Await Court's Decision on Motion to Acquit.

Friends of Jesse Ullman of Far Rockaway, who was tried last week in Long Island City for the killing of Millard Seaman, are anxiously awaiting the decision of Judge Humphries in the Queens County Court which will decide Ullman's fate.

When the evidence was all in last Friday Eugene L. M. Young, counsel for Ullman, made a motion that the Judge instruct the jury to acquit. It is usual in such cases for the court to decide such a motion at once, but Judge Humphries took the matter under advisement until this morning at 10 o'clock.

Ullman's arrest and trial for the killing of Seaman was brought about through a petition to Gov. Hughes, signed by 500 friends of the dead man, asking the Governor to instruct District Attorney De Witt of Queens County to make an investigation. Prior to that Ullman had been exonerated by a Coroner's jury.

The shooting occurred on Aug. 8. Ullman's home adjoins that of Police Captain James Keene in Far Rockaway. He said Seaman was trying to break into Capt. Keene's house and shot him.

$1 APIECE FOR A PARK RIDE.

Equestrians Whose Horses Ran Away Fined by the Magistrate.

Hundreds of visitors to Central Park witnessed an exciting chase yesterday, which ended in the arrest of two riders on the bridle path.

Frederick Schaumberg of 839 Madison Avenue and Theodore Metzger of 152 West Seventy-sixth Street, mounted on spirited horses, had just entered the Park at Seventy-second Street, and started north along the bridle path.

The horses were frisky, and after a lot of prancing the one ridden by Mr. Metzger bolted. The other followed, and soon both horses were racing along the path.

Both men were arrested and taken to the Yorkville Court, where they were fined $1 each by Magistrate Herrman.

On Aug. 4, 1862, at the age of 15 years, he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Twenty-third New York Volunteer Regiment, and served for three years as a regular soldier, being mustered out at the close of the war.

IN THE SPRING

If the lady will take some notes from The Delineator for April and be guided accordingly in her selection of spring clothes, she is apt to find that when the young man sees the effect his fancy will turn more lightly this spring than it does most springs.

If, after the lady is entirely through considering the clothes, she will turn to the new department with the Italian name she may find matter for her consideration that will lift her thoughts above clothes. At any rate, she will have a chance to find out exactly what a pleasant and sometimes thoughtful man sometimes thinks about women. She will also find the beginning of a most fascinating new novel by Mary Stewart Cutting. You know her, of course.

Sandwiched in between a lot of good fiction and interesting articles she will find interesting subjects in the department treated so wholesomely and so helpfully that if she doesn't look out the inside of her head will be even more beautiful than the outside of her person.

No other periodical today so completely ministers to a woman's wants as The Delineator—whether she wishes to be well dressed, well read, or well fed, or whether she considers all three as mere details, and wishes most of all to be an active force for good in her own society and in her home. So whatever else you do, get

WESTON TO GO ON LECTURE PLATFORM

Aged Pedestrian to Tell of Vicissitudes of Transcontinental Tramp.

Special to The New York Times.

EMPORIA, Mo., March 20.—Edward Payson Weston, transcontinental pedestrian, will go upon the lecture platform at the conclusion of his ocean-to-ocean walk in May. The lecture he has prepared is "Vicissitudes of a Walk." He will describe his various walks in the United States and England, interposing numerous amusing incidents and anecdotes. He will also tell how he has cared for himself so as to become a strong old man. He will tour the United States and England, giving his lectures in all the principal cities.

Dr. William Street of Canton, Ohio, is manager of his lecture tour and is arranging the details. The money to defray the expenses of the present walk, which was advanced by a New York man, will be returned from the proceeds of his lectures. He will receive an additional $500 on his lecture contract for each day he arrives ahead of his original schedule, besides the $500 per day he receives on the wager with his Wall Street friends. The price of his lectures will depend on how many days he arrives above the scheduled time. He does not know what each lecture will cost. His expenses on his last walk were $4,650.

This walk is made for the purpose of establishing a record to assist the sale of his lectures. His expenses have been low on this walk. The Atchison, Topeko & Santa Fé Railroad furnishes free of charge to him two men, a motorman and valet; a gasoline motor car, and hotel accommodations. In return for this he intends to give his lecture in the reading rooms of the Santa Fé employes. East of Chicago he will follow the Lehigh Valley route to New York.

"I am walking across the United States for Edward Payson Weston," he said to-day when a visitor asked him if he was not walking to advertise the Santa Fé. "I am not walking as an advertisement of any commercial organization, nor in the interest of any newspaper, but to reimburse and vindicate myself for my failure a year ago. I also want to show to the American youth the value of walking as exercise and how a temperate life and correct habits preserve the physical powers."

Mr. Weston has had a busy Sunday here to-day. He arose this morning at 6 o'clock, and, after eating a light breakfast, he wrote letters until 1 o'clock, when he ate dinner. From 1:30 until 4 o'clock he received visits from many of the townspeople and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé officials.

Mr. Weston is very fond of children, and the two little daughters of L. Stanley, trainmaster of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé, visited the aged pedestrian. As they turned to leave he kissed both of them good-bye.

Mr. Weston retired at 4 o'clock this afternoon, to sleep for his long walk of fifty-five miles to Pauline, a small station near Topeka, where he will spend the night. He dislikes to stop in the large towns because of the crowds which bother him. People crowd around, and he fears that some one will step on his feet. He will get up at 11 o'clock, eat his usual breakfast of two poached eggs, toast, and coffee, and start toward Kansas City. Thirty years ago he promised his mother "never to work on Sunday," and he never has.

BISHOP ATTACKS ROMANISM.

Cranston Says Power of Catholicism Is Growing Alarmingly Here.

Special to The New York Times.

YORK, Penn, March 20.—Bishop Earl Cranston of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in his sermon here to-day before the Central Pennsylvania Conference, touched upon the recent tilt between ex-Vice President Fairbanks and the Pope, and delivered a scathing arraignment of the Catholic Church. His subject was "Applied Protestantism—The Church and the Government." He said in part:

"The world to-day presents a remarkable spectacle. The ancient monarchies of Asia have yielded to the logic of events. Japan has a Parliament. China has promised constitutional government and is working toward it in her patient way. India is under benign humanitarian rule. In Europe, France has cast off the handicap of ecclesiasticism; Italy enjoys religious liberty at last, and Spain is heading toward it. Even autocratic Russia has admitted a form of representative co-operation in the Government, with a measure of religious tolerance. So that America is the only Nation where a Methodist or other Protestant may not advertise a public preaching service. On the North American Continent, in the great States which were consecrated from their beginning to civil and religious liberty, we find a strange reversal of the trend observable elsewhere. Defeated and distressed beyond the seas, the forces that have battled against the rights of man are rallying under the very flag that is the symbol of political and religious freedom.

"Now suppose, with the addition of more territory having twelve or more millions of Roman Catholics, the majority of the people of this Government fifty years hence were of that creed; who doubts for a moment that the reigning Pope would assume control of legislation and Government? He would then define Christianity for all of us. Since I first noticed this peril almost thirty-five years ago the relative voting strength of Romanism in America has grown alarmingly, and it is remarkable how that vote solidly gravitates toward the party in power.

"If the rank and file of our Catholic population were left to themselves there would be nothing to fear. They would be good Americans. But they will never be let alone until they break away from Rome. Our only protection, then, is to hold public sentiment to the side of freedom. The recent Fairbanks episode was providential. It jolted the people into consciousness and set them thinking. Keep them thinking and all will be well."

CALLS ROCKEFELLER INSPIRED

Dr. MacArthur Says God Gave Him the Gift to Earn and Bestow Money.

"The Rockefeller Foundation is the most colossal effort ever attempted for the benefit of the human race," declared the Rev. Dr. MacArthur, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, yesterday morning, addressing the Current Events Class of his congregation.

"Mr. Rockefeller shows as much originality and genius in his disposition of his wealth as he showed in its acquisition," said Dr. MacArthur. "God has given him the talent for making money, as truly as God has given to other men the genius which manifests itself in literature and the arts and sciences. It is as much the duty of Mr. Rockefeller to make money for the benefit of humanity as it is the duty of other men to bless their race as mechanics, farmers, and manufacturers.

"The first and most striking feature of this Foundation is its breadth of purpose. It is not tied to any color, class, or creed in its beneficent influences. Neither is it limited to any type of civilization nor to any one country. This fund may be used for educational, social, or religious work in any country or any form of philanthropic and benevolent work. All countries, all centuries, and all civilizations belong to its interests and may receive its benefactions.

"In this respect Mr. Rockefeller showed his faith in posterity. Almost all great estates and benefactions are tied up so that they are long managed by the dead hand of the donor. Mr. Rockefeller, on the contrary, is willing to trust the generations to come as to the wise disposition of his vast benefactions.

"Thousands will rise up in all the coming years and bless the name of John D. Rockefeller," concluded Dr. MacArthur, "and to bless God that He endowed this remarkable man with unique ability rapidly to acquire and generously bestow vast sums for the good of men and the glory of God."

ENGLISH JEWS LUKEWARM.

Dr. Wise Says They Are Too Indifferent to Start a Schism.

The Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, who returned last week from a visit to the leaders in England of the liberal Jewish movement, preached in the Free Synagogue, in West Eighty-first Street, yesterday morning on "Is There to be a Schism in English Jewry?"

He declared that the orthodox English Jews had no understanding of what the liberal Jewish movement means in America, having the mistaken impression that it was an attempt to escape from Judaism.

"I tell you there is more enthusiasm in the liberal Jewish movement in America than among the orthodox Jews in England," said Dr. Wise. "The power and example of the English Church, the great English Church establishment, of which Englishmen are dreaming of some form of disestablishment, but not complete disestablishment, has been the chief foe of the further growth of the liberal Jewish movement there. Some there are orthodox because they think Jewish orthodoxy fashionable. I thank God for that, for we do not have to depend upon fashion.

"It was said that the movement there would lead to schism. My friends, there isn't enough left of Jewish orthodoxy in England to make a schism. It was said to be a menace to Judaism. The liberal movement is a menace to sham and to the masquerade of orthodoxy to put down tyranny."

Speaking of the few men who attend worship in the English synagogues on Saturday, and declaring that the Jewish Sabbath was sacred to the reform Jewish movement, Dr. Wise said the liberal movement was trying to bring about better conditions than existed in many forms of orthodoxy whereby men failed to observe any one of the seven days of the week for worship.

SPEEDWAY DRIVERS IN LIVELY BRUSHES

Fine Weather Brings Out Light Harness Drivers—Many Newcomers on the Drive.

There was more speeding on the Speedway yesterday than last Sunday, and horses that were out showed in good shape. While a number of well-matched steppers were driven, yet their owners again refused brushing, and will follow this rule until their favorites have had enough jogging to prepare them for hard work. Newcomers are showing up steadily, and when the drive is open for Sunday brushes and matinées, a number of real good ones will be seen among this contingent. Thomas B. Leahy, who for several seasons drove Princess Pique, Who Knows, and others, but who gave up driving horses, is back again with a pacer which will be heard from later in the year.

She is Princess Direct, (2:14¼,) which gained her mark last season over half-mile tracks and showed well in fast company throughout. Princess Direct was trained and raced by the Buffalo trainer M. L. Allen, and showed a trial mile in 2:10 over a half-mile track, stepping the last quarter better than 30 seconds.

The most interesting stranger on the drive was a trotting filly driven by Eddie Bass. She is named Irene Baron. Bass started her in a brush against Andrew Crawford's The Spoiler, and was the winner.

Sadie Mack, driven by A. B. McGaffney, challenged Americus, and the pair had four well-contested brushes. The first was very close, and, while Sadie won, Americus got the credit, because the former left her feet part of the distance. In the second and third the gelding carried the mare to breaks and won handily, but in the fourth Sadie behaved better, and won by a short margin.

Thomas Lawson's trotter Jap and A. Arenson's old-timer Hylie Bird (2:15¼) had two closely contested brushes, the former winning both rather handily. Arenson did not bring out his new trotter, Ella Todd, (2:23¼.)

Leo Ottinger was out with Lady Worthy, which stepped her two fast heats. His brother Max drove Nashville, but made no attempt at speeding. W. B. Clarke was out behind Joe Jap in a two-man wagon, and horsemen were disappointed not to see his new trotter, J. Q., (2:15¼.) Philip Heirperheusen drove Lemon Girl.

The trio of the fastest pacers on the Speedway—Claro, driven by Joseph F. Gibbons; C. Hackett's Who Knows, and Sol B. Wolff's Minnie Albert—reached the Speedway together, but, much to the disappointment of the big crowd, avoided each other.

The proposed match between Who Knows and Minnie Albert is off, at least for what it was intended, yet the owner of the mare appears ready to go any way Mr. Hackett wants. Minnie Albert has the biggest following. James A. Murphy gave his handsome chestnut, Kim, (2:13¾,) a fast heat. Charles Welland first drove Sid Axworthy (2:12¼) to a cart, and later brought out Innerguard, (2:06¼.)

Hugh Reiley showed his new pacer, B. On Time, for the first time. William McMillan was out behind the fast four-year-old Jay Gay, with which he won many brushes last Fall. C. Hackett's old pacer, Sallie A., is now being driven by W. Costello. Onother old-timer seen yesterday was Aristocrat, driven by Arthur Malady.

CALLS CHURCHGOERS SELFISH

Rev. Dr. Stires Declares It Is Hard to Tell the Real Christians.

The Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of St. Thomas's Church, in his sermon yesterday said that selfishness and greed are so prevalent among churchgoers to-day that it is impossible to tell the followers of Christ from those who are not. He said that many men who call themselves Christians, and even women whose names were recorded on the church books, opposed Gov. Hughes's effort to eliminate gambling from the race course. The matter of drinking among women he dismissed with the simple sentence: "It is well known that women drink."

The preacher declared that some of the women whose names are on church records found a vent for the same spirit in vulgar games.

Visitors going to the home of church members on Sunday afternoon will find certain preparations going on. When they express surprise the hostess will say, 'What's the harm of a little bridge on Sunday? You ought to get out of that old-fashioned notion.'"

He said that by making sacrifices the Christians of to-day could make themselves of the same physical, moral, and spiritual strength of those of years ago. He said that by some sacrifices self-indulgent parents, who, by their selfishness, had broken the ties of home, might have brought happiness to themselves and to their children.

St. Patrick's Palm Sunday Services.

Palm Sunday was celebrated at St. Patrick's Cathedral yesterday, and the church was filled completely. Archbishop Farley blessed the palms which were distributed to the congregation. The ceremonies concluded with the celebration of mass by the Rev. Dr. William F. Hughes. There was no sermon.

Mortgage on Mission Is Canceled.

At the afternoon service in Christ's Mission, 331 West Fifty-seventh Street, yesterday, the pastor, the Rev. James A. O'Connor, announced that $7,500 had recently been received to pay a mortgage on the mission building, and that the mortgage had been canceled. The Rev. R. S. MacArthur, one of the trustees of the Mission, congratulated Pastor O'Connor.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

It Is Held That Duty Is Collectible at Time Goods Are Delivered.

In overruling a protest filed by F. L. Roberts & Co., the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday held that the duty collectible at the time merchandise is delivered to an importer and he acquires control over it is the duty that should be assessed upon the goods.

The merchandise, the liquidation of the entry of which is the subject of this protest, was entered on Aug. 5, 1909, but duties were not paid on the goods and permit of delivery issued until Aug. 6. The new tariff law by its terms took effect on Aug. 6. The merchandise was therefore entered while the old law was in force, but duty was paid on the merchandise and the permit of delivery issued after the new law became effective.

It was contended by the Government that under the operation of Section 29 of the Aldrich-Payne tariff duty should be assessed upon the merchandise in question under the new law, and under this law the Collector levied duty. On the other hand, the importers allege that the merchandise having been entered under the old law, the provisions of Section 29 do not bring it within the new law for the reason that it was not "under bond for warehousing, transportation, or any other purpose."

General Appraiser Hay, in overruling the protest, refers to a case passed upon by the Federal court in 1883. He thinks this case controlling in the present instance, and says that it is clear that Congress intended to embrace all merchandise still in the custody of the Government for which no permit of delivery had been issued.

The Weekly Financial Review.

Investors who are partial to municipal bonds will find information of interest to them in a special article in to-day's NEW YORK TIMES WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW on the New York bond sale and the general market for city and State securities. There is also a good article for those who are interested in any way in the business of the United States Steel Corporation, being a plain statement of just what the "Steel Trust" is doing, with a table of comparative figures comparing this year's business with the two past years.

Carefully hunted-up facts about New York Central's holdings of stocks and bonds in its subsidiaries in another special will give stockholders a better understanding of the monthly reports of earnings of the Central lines.

Other interesting things in to-day's number have to do with the Hocking Valley control, the anomalous cry of the railroads about high wages and taxes in the face of daily announcements of dividend increase, and the cheerful news of the revival in the steel industry.

MONROE CITY, Mo., March 20.—The body of Prof. James T. Vaughn was exhumed for the second time to-day by attorneys representing Mrs. Alma Vaughn, the widow, and Dr. J. R. Hull, who are awaiting trial on a charge of murdering the professor.

The exhumation was undertaken with great secrecy. The grave was opened under cover of darkness and the body taken to the sexton's toolhouse. There the tongue and spine were removed. The body was later reinterred.

Prof. Vaughn, according to the defense, lived in constant fear of cancer of the tongue, and it is believed that organ was removed this morning for pathological examination.

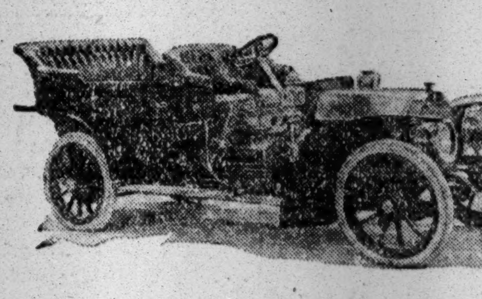
PALMER & SINGER CARS have been recognized everywhere for their smartness, their distinguished appearance. The reliable service they have rendered has been a conspicuous feature.



SMART appearance is an indicative of quality as any other attribute of a motor car. It can be accomplished only by the exercise of exquisite care, combined with good taste. It is sought only by those who appreciate nicety of detail. It denotes sound business principles.

Sound business policy would never permit the enhancement of the exterior and the neglect of the interior. The mechanism is the essential. Greater care would be taken to make the mechanism right than would be expended on car externals.

The character of the service rendered Palmer and Singer owners—day by day for the past few years—proves conclusively that this care has been exercised in the manufacture of all our cars.

Among other important details that have made this service possible is the triplicate jet carburetor, an exclusive Palmer and Singer patent, adjusting the gasoline feed to suit the speed of the engine exactly, making for economy and perfect operation.

THE MACHINE.

The inquiry which Mr. Hitchcock of the Insurance Department is conducting into the methods of certain fire insurance companies in influencing legislation throws a good deal of light on the workings of the machinery of the Republican Party, its character, and aims.

Professedly that machinery is the organization of the party through elected leaders of various grades to carry out the principles of the party and to win elections by legitimate means. The latter is supposed to be subordinate to the former and a means to its accomplishment. In practice the winning of elections first becomes the chief end in itself, and then follows the advancement of the selfish aims of the men who run the machinery, regardless of the party and even at the expense of its real interests. Mr. Kennedy and his principals seem to have dealt with the machine for a long time and as to a good many matters, the details of which escaped Mr. Kennedy's intermittent memory, but the purpose and nature of which are plainly enough disclosed. They were in no sense matters of statesmanship or of public policy, but solely of "business," and were treated as nearly on a business basis as popular prejudice and the Criminal Code permit. On the one hand the insurance men wanted something that was worth money to them and for which they were willing and even anxious to spend money. On the other the machine men wanted money and were able to give an equivalent for it.

It was purely a Republican affair. A Democratic Assemblyman who seems to have got wind of what was going on and eager to "seek light" as to the opportunities presented was detected in his impertinent plan by a Republican machine man and the broker who was handling the business, notified in time, promptly repelled him. On the other hand, Republican "friends" were taken care of in considerable numbers at the cost of some thousands of dollars. A brisk exchange of letters and telegrams kept the insurance men informed of the effect produced by their generous gifts. Bills were passed at their "request," weak points were strengthened, amiable statesmen in committees or elsewhere were "seen" by the grateful up-State gentlemen and the respectable officers, Directors, and agents of our great insurance companies gladly accepted the benefits of the dirty "truck and dicker."

It would be absurd to say that this sort of work meets the approval of the mass of the Republican Party. On the contrary, it is undoubtedly detested and condemned, as like work is by the Democrats when it occurs among them. It is likely at the next election, in connection with similar and worse corruption exposed at this session, to lead to the retirement of some of the more active leaders, and even to the defeat of the party. It is an evil that has grown up because of the enormous amount of politics made inevitable by our system and the extreme difficulty of fixing responsibility. No radical reform of it will be practicable until the system is greatly simplified and something like working accountability provided.

MOVEMENT IN GERMANY.

An incident occurred during the past week in the German Reichstag which has not received very much attention and which may well have no immediate consequences of importance, but is, nevertheless, significant and unprecedented. On the motion of a Socialist-Democratic member a resolution was passed by a small majority declaring that the Chancellor was responsible for his acts, and for such acts of the Emperor as require his signature, to the Reichstag.

It has been an accepted principle of the Constitution of the German Empire that the Chancellor, or Prime Minister, is responsible to the Emperor alone, and that in the exercise of such discretion as is recognized by the Constitution, the Emperor himself cannot be held responsible anywhere. When the celebrated incident of the Emperor's statement to an English paper arose Prince von Buelow declared that it would be impossible for him or any other Minister to conduct the affairs of the Government if the Emperor insisted on acting in entire independence and irresponsibility. The Emperor yielded for the time being, but he was deeply hurt, and there is little doubt that Buelow's fate was sealed from that time. Yet even the Chancellor scrupulously avoided any admission that he was himself responsible to the Reichstag.

Then came the failure of his finance bills and his resignation. Great care was taken to explain that he did not retire because of that misfortune, but because his health was not equal to the task of dealing with the Reichstag, but he did retire and his successor, Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg, began by accepting the finance plan of the majority in the Reichstag which Buelow had rejected. A change of Ministers had followed the loss of a majority and the policy of the majority had been imposed on the new Minister. Precisely the process required by the British Constitution had been followed. The principle of Ministerial responsibility had obviously, whether acknowledged or repudiated, been applied. Now the principle is definitely adopted by a majority of the Reichstag. The majority is small and may be a temporary one. It may be a long time before any attempt is made to act on it, and the attempt, when made, may be defeated. But the adoption of the resolution remains a specific and concrete fact. The Reichstag rests on universal suffrage, and this is a landmark in the advance of the German people to a more practical and immediate control of their own affairs.

SHOULD BE A WORTHY MONUMENT.

One of the strongest arguments advanced in favor of the City Hall Park site for the new Court House is that work can be begun there at once. It is a fallacious argument. The Tweed Court House and the brownstone building of the City Courts must be first torn down and at considerable delay and great expense temporary quarters must be found for the courts in various parts of the town. The public armories cannot accommodate them all, and there must be a great deal of alteration in the armories to make them serviceable for court purposes. A large sum will be required annually for rents while the new building is under way. No appropriation has yet been made for the new building. A large sum will be required, probably $10,000,000.

It should be borne in mind, too, that this does not include the cost of the land. In fact the land in the park is priceless. There is a chance to recover it for park uses, which should not be missed. The city could not sell the land. To part with a square yard of it for a new building would be the worst kind of improvidence.

To build on the two blocks north of the park will be expensive, especially if the grand scheme of a monumental group of related buildings is accepted, but not nearly as expensive as the destruction of park land. If the Reade and Chambers Street plan is accepted the city of the future will have a splendid architectural ornament, the law courts of the county and city quarters equal in beauty, spaciousness, and utility to the palaces of justice in the Old World. To build in the City Hall Park would be to erect a monument to stupid municipal improvidence, to keep before the eyes of future generations a lasting reminder of the perversity and nearsightedness of their forefathers.

OUR CONTEMPT FOR LAW.

In his speech at Rochester President Taft defended his pending railway bill upon the ground that "it allows that which the railroads have to do anyway, whether the law forbids it or not." It is worth noting that not alone the railways are in contempt of the law, and are defended if not justified in their illegal acts by the opinion which President Taft thus expressed. Practically the entire price structure of American domestic commerce is established and maintained in the same manner as the rate schedules of the railways, and in neglect of the law forbidding it. The process is thus described by The Iron Age in its latest issue:

> After discussion and a careful canvass of the situation one of the manufacturers remarks that he is going to make his discount 75 and 10 per cent. Another manufacturer then intimates that he has been feeling the necessity of making an advance and intends to make his price 75 and 10 per cent., "without regard to what the rest of you may do," and so it goes around the circle, and the new price is in effect. They have not agreed (?) on their action, but by a very happy coincidence they simultaneously determine on the same price, a price which they also understand will be maintained by their competitors. Shortly after one of these meetings a manufacturer from Ohio who was asked whether he had agreed to maintain a given price on a certain line of goods, answered: "Do I want to go to the penitentiary? I have told you what my price is, and I understand the other manufacturers intend to make the same price; but remember there is no agreement."

This relates to the hardware trade, but the prices of all iron and steel products are made in the same way. It is a general trade practice, and works in both directions. The above account might almost be a report of the manner in which the iron and steel price schedules were reduced and raised again after the crisis of 1907. There is so far from being anything new about this that it is merely the continuance of practices as old as trade itself. The practices at which the statute against agreements in restraint of trade is aimed have not been affected in substance. Forms have been altered in some cases; some practices have been stopped, but the course of trade remains unaltered, although the statute is as plain in language, and as comprehensive in its prohibitions, as mind of man can frame. It is this statute which the Supreme Court now has in hand, and which the business world is holding its breath about.

The old-fashioned English statesman who confessed that he did not know how to indict an entire people is hopelessly behind our Congress. It not only has indicted an entire people; it has converted them into an indistinguishable mass of unconvicted criminals, lacking only the finding of a jury to send them all to prison with other felons. And yet they are justified by President Taft as well as by his predecessor. What is the truth? Are we all villains because we ignore laws which, taken together, command and forbid acts which are as inconsistent as black and white, and which taken separately are inconsistent with commercial solvency? Or is the fault primarily with those who enact such statutes, and those who seek to enforce them with one hand and to amend them with the other hand? Notoriously President Roosevlt was in this inconsistent position. President Taft inherited and is prosecuting some cases, while at the same time his pending railway bill is criticised because it authorizes the same acts.

The practices of the railways are no different from those of most traders. It is well to advise those who criticise the railways that they are in the same boat. When a half dozen dealers in nails get together, and one of them remarks, as though talking to himself, that his price for nails is $2.50, and when thereafter it happens that all six sell nails for that price they are guilty of the same acts as that for which railways are blamed by them and prosecuted by the vigilant authorities. Never were there so many agreements in restraint of trade. The railway wars which bankrupted thousands of miles of lines were stopped by acts which the laws forbid. The war in the steel trade, which was bankrupting many, was stopped by the formation of the Steel Trust, and its dissolution, if conceivable, would be an immeasurable calamity.

All these issues are in the balance, and still some wonder that we had one panic over the business, and that some uneasiness is felt at the present time. Why is it so hard to grasp the idea that commercial peace is only one degree less desirable than political peace?

THE USES OF WEALTH.

It has been suggested that the Rockefeller Foundation could confer on the world no greater boon than illuminating oil at cost instead of a profit. It would seem as though a single instant's thought would show why this is impracticable. If the Rockefeller oil were sold without profit nobody else could live in the oil business. There would be many bankruptcies, and the genius which has cheapened oil by ceasing to make profits for itself would dry up one of the greatest sources for the creation of capital the world has ever witnessed. The suggested boon would be a boomerang.

The best use of wealth is an economic use. An honest profit is a sign of a good use, a reward of merit, and not an extortion. The squandering of wealth in an uneconomic manner, even for well-meant but mistaken benevolence, is not a merit. Compare the use of a fortune in a productive industry with the use of the same fortune in the purchase of a diamond or a picture. Millions spent for luxuries, even if every penny can be "afforded" in the sense that it is not disbursed in excess of income, will have a very different effect upon the country from the expenditure of a like sum in the purchase of steel rails or agricultural machinery.

Careful investigation indicates that the split infinitive in some of the reports of Earl Grey's speech at Albany Saturday night was either a stenographer's or a telegraph operator's error. The burden of the evidence is that the Governor General did not say "to fearlessly defend," but "fearlessly to defend." The slip would scarcely be noticed, because of the common and buoyant use of the split infinitive, except in a speech by a British nobleman of literary culture. We do not now remember a British nobleman fond of splitting his infinitives except Lord Macaulay, and he doesn't count—as a nobleman.

Once more King Edward VII. is in a precarious state of health. But he has weathered many an attack of sickness since the world eagerly read the daily bulletins of the progress of his fever nearly fifty years ago, and since his quick recovery from the malady which delayed the coronation in 1902 his subjects have been expecting him to live as long as his mother.

Prof. Bragg's discovery, communicated to the western world in the special cable dispatches of The Sunday Times, that the alpha rays shot out by radium travel 10,000 miles a second, encircling the earth, if they happen to be going that way, in two seconds and a half, and possess a measure of energy 250,000 times greater than that of any other known atom, is highly interesting and would be more important if we knew what use to make of that velocity and energy. This globe for 400,000,000 years, according to the very latest Chicago estimate of its age, has been swinging through space at a tremendous rate of speed, but its inhabitants, except the few who are aware of the higher mathematics, know nothing about its velocity. We may take our hats off to the discoverer of a kind of matter that is neither solid, liquid, nor gas, but with limited comprehension of the significance of his discovery.

A correspondent of one of the morning newspapers suggests the adoption of a nickel for tipping on all occasions in this country. It is one way out. Shall we admit that tipping is a necessary evil, and tip economically, or shall we continue to decry tipping as an abominable nuisance and give more than we can afford?

The Indiana novelist whose father has just written his first novel at the age of 70 will now learn how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have a parent who thinks that if one member of the family can make "best sellers" all the folks ought to get to work on them. An imitative father must be a perplexing problem in a family. The pain of a popular lady novelist when her husband takes to fiction as a vocation must be mild compared with the sufferings of a literary son who sees his aged and hitherto respected father turning story-teller. Suppose old John Shakespeare of Stratford, emboldened by boy William's unexpected triumph, had broken away from his hides and the butcher business to try his hand on a "Julius Caesar" or "Hamlet" of his own! The Baconians would have had their hands full then.

The Yonkers opposition to the pay-as-you-enter car is significant. Those new public vehicles have not altogether satisfied expectations. The starting and stopping of most of them test the acrobatic skill of the standing passenger. But it would be better to improve than to abolish them. The machinery could certainly be altered, and two or three officials could be detailed to help the conductor collect fares at terminal points.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Signs of Trouble to Come.

Arthur A. Lovejoy contributes to Science a distinctly savage criticism of what he declares to be an unjustifiable change of policy in the awarding of pensions to college professors from the Carnegie Foundation Fund. According to the original rules and announcements, he says, the pensions were to be practically service pensions, in no sense dependent upon the beneficiary's inability for further work. The allowances were to be taken, not as charity, but as a right, the teacher getting the money assigned to him, to quote from the first annual report, "on exactly the same basis as that upon which he receives his active salary, as a part of his academic compensation."

Now the Trustees of the Foundation have determined to abolish all service pensions as such, substituting for them a system of disability pensions. Moreover, President Pritchett, in his fourth annual report, hints that too many professors are persuading themselves that they are specially intended for research or are simply and confessedly "tired of teaching," and he says that the rule as at first interpreted, "offers too large a temptation to certain qualities of universal human nature."

Another reason given in the report for abolishing service pensions is "the tendency of the teacher assured of a retiring pension to become ultra critical toward the administration" of his university. Of this Prof. Lovejoy writes:

> This seems to mean, if it means anything, either that an important proportion of the members of the profession are kept in order only through their fear of losing their positions, and that, if assured of an independent competency, they would forthwith behave in an unreasonable manner; or else it means that, whether the criticism that might proceed from professors were reasonable or not, they should, in any case, be kept silent and subservient by a mild form of terrorism.

Here is evidently the beginning of an important controversy. Prof. Lovejoy's resentment of the views expressed in the report is likely to be shared by other members of his profession, and they may join him in the demand he makes for a change in the administration of the fund. In that case Mr. Carnegie might have some trouble in quieting the disturbance in waters which he had hoped to do so much to render peaceful.

Art Has Its Mysteries.

People who know a lot about art show — to those who only "know what they like"—a mysterious reverence for names. A picture or statue is offered for sale as the work of this or that famous man. It fetches a big price and finds its way sooner or later into a museum, where it is put in a place of honor, and for a longer or shorter period it receives the admiration of all. Suddenly somebody comes along and denies and disproves what is called its "authenticity." At once, from being an object of worship by the elect and of respect from common folk, it loses all value and is hastily removed to a cellar.

Why? Whatever of beauty the picture or statue had before the discovery of the mistake as to its origin it retains after that disclosure, and there would be much difficulty in proving—to a Philistine—that whether one man or another made it in the slightest degree affects its intrinsic value.

This is a great mystery—to those for whom it is any mystery at all. Books, now, are different. They stand on their own merits. They are not liked the better because written by a noted author, or the worse because anonymous. That last statement may not be quite true, but it is almost true—it is true in the long run.

Invented a New Grievance.

Judges have been attacked for many reasons and for most of the reasons many times, but never before, probably, was the removal of an occupant of the bench demanded on grounds as peculiar as those which have inspired "labor" to start a determined campaign against Justice Charles Garrison of the New Jersey Supreme Court. The grievance is that he recently declared excessive a verdict giving $8,500 to a little girl, one of whose legs had been cut off by a trolley car. In explanation of this decision Justice Garrison said it was evident the jury had not given sufficient consideration to the great advances made in recent years in the manufacture of artificial limbs.

The Essex Trades Council, being vehemently of the opinion that, however it may have been with the jury, the Justice has an altogether too high opinion as to the adequacy, even now, of a leg of the kind commonly, though always erroneously, called "cork" as a substitute for one made of flesh and bones, adopted resolutions to the effect that the Justice is a most reprehensible and heartless person, and therefore unworthy to hold his position any longer. These resolutions the council forwarded to the Camden Central Labor Union, and that body has asked the organized workingmen all over the State to exert all their influence toward getting the offender retired to private life.

The problems involved in this controversy are numerous, delicate, and complex. It is obvious, of course, that the present possibility of getting an artificial limb capable of performing most of the services of the one supplied by nature does mitigate the misfortune suffered by the child whom the trolley car mutilated. There is in consequence a chance that the jury didn't, or that a jury mightn't, give that fact as much weight as it should. But would the definite sum of $8,500 more than make up for the undetermined, yet unquestionable, inferiority of an artificial leg as compared with one of nature's fashioning?

Upon the answer to that question depends the rightness or the wrongness of Justice Garrison's decision. It is clearly a question on which opinions can honestly differ. As cash in hand, $8,500 is doubtless a good deal of money, but as payment for a member as important as a leg few people would be eager or even willing to accept it, particularly if the amputation were to be performed by the crude surgery of a car wheel. We do not ourselves think that the Jersey unions will succeed in getting Justice Garrison removed, but on the other hand we are not altogether without sympathy with their desire to do it.

FOR "EXHIBITION PALACES."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why is it that an average intelligent person of our Nation has not as much education and cultural feeling for the sense of art as have other nations, such as Germany and France? Compare New York's Annual Art Exhibition at Fifty-seventh Street with that of the Official National Exhibition at Berlin in the Exhibition Palace at Lehrter Bahnrof.

The Exhibition Halls at Ausstellungs Park (mind "Park") at Lehrter Bahnrof, are of imposing glass construction, covering a space something similar to Madison Square Garden Building, or even larger space. The palace is divided into various halls, perhaps fifty in number, large and small halls, suitably arranged for all qualities of light and decorative wall arrangements, and the principal thing of all, extensive parks surround the palace in which concert pavilions, promenades, terraces, with splendid restaurants, including seating capacity for leisure digestion of artistic nourishment. There is refinement in the whole atmosphere.

The average intelligent Berliner, as well as the better class of people and also cosmopolitan visitors to the city, makes it a habit to go regularly to spend the evenings there during the Summer season.

Why cannot we have it as those Germans have it? Even, taking into consideration our different local and habitual requirements. Cannot we have it? There are two desirable spots on Riverside Drive which would be appropriate for enterprises of the same order as described above. One would be located about 101st Street, where is now visible to all a red brick private house. A long stretch of grass plot owned by the city, which extends from 104th Street down to Ninety-eighth Street, would allow enough space for the main building of a prospective exhibition palace, and an imposing cupola dome would dominate Riverside Drive in both directions, as well as the Hudson River. The building could extend as far as the westerly edge of the Drive—in fact, could take in the Drive, which could be enriched by concert hall, pavilions, restaurant, and also seating capacity, and there would be ample space to allow such improvements as above mentioned, and as befitting a pleasant Art Exhibition Park. Thousands of beauty-loving and artistic people, seeking free musical entertainment and art paintings during the Summer months, certainly would enjoy their evenings at such Hudson River Park. Needless to say, an imposing view of such structure from Riverside Drive would be of advantage to the entire section of the Drive, while that unique construction tunnel over the railroad tracks would destroy the disturbing ugliness of the Drive and perhaps lead to further extensions of colonnade and promenade verandas along the whole length of the Drive and for the future.

The second available spot on Riverside Drive is above the landing at Fifty-ninth Street. The greatest depth of this plot is reached at Eighty-first Street, and here, though less imposing, it is true, than at 101st Street, but more spacious, the main building could arise just at the edge of the Hudson River in the midst of that oval-shaped widening of the embankment; in fact, I do not know of any more picturesque and beautiful spot for a building of that sort on the whole of Manhattan Island. The public piers at the landing of Eighty-seventh Street now with their embankments would furnish space for further extension along the border front. The railroad tracks, in this instance, will, like the Speedway, disappear below the building, while the tunnels over the tracks at both ends of the building as far as it passes through the park, will give a solid constructed socket for the colonnade on which a concert pavilion could be built. Below the terraces a space for storage and expressage rooms, (the morgue of the refuse,) could be placed, while the building then outlined by walks and colonnades along the river would stand in the midst of the park encircled by the Drive and would surely grow to be a favorite centre for art lovers.

It is, of course, difficult to describe my plans verbally, in narrow space, sufficiently to be understood, especially as far as concerns the unique construction of tunnels, terraces, and colonnades, as I have pictured them in my mind. Illustrations and plans are necessary for this.

I am ready, however, to come forward with such data, as they are a part of a project of revolutionary character for far-reaching changes in New York, general arrangement of public buildings, and landscape gardening.

The main clue of this would be to place City Hall in the same line of construction at about Seventy-ninth Street, west and east, through Central Park.

But will the city ever allow an outsider to submit plans of this character which are fancied solely for the improvement and in order to beautify the city? Would it not be more economical for the city to at once start such a project, as it is evident same will have to be done at a later period, and probably at a much larger sum than at present?

THE PERSONAL TAX.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read your editorial article in this morning's Times entitled "Removing Personal Tax," and I particularly note its last paragraph, in which you say: "It will be interesting to observe who will defend the personal tax and by what arguments."

At the outset I wish to state that my particular reason for opposing the abolishing the tax on personal property is that I do not think it fair to place all of the burden on real estate. I am an extensive owner of real estate in the City of New York, and I am also the attorney for numerous clients who are large real estate owners, and I know from their experience as well as from my own that the return on real estate investments for the last few years has been such that, if it were to be impaired by further increase in taxation, it would almost be equivalent to confiscation. This applies particularly to what is known generally as tenement house property, which is owned by comparatively poor people in most instances, and the burdens of all of which fall on the poor.

I have been somewhat surprised by the published reports of owners of real estate who favor abolishing the tax on personal property, such as you refer to, as the result of a recent canvass made by the Tax Reform Association. I think the statement is incontrovertible that no one who desires to live in the City of New York at the present time, or do business therein, avoids an actual residence by reason of the tax laws, but by reason of these tax laws and for the purpose of evading them it is well known that many claim a legal residence out of the State.

I realize that under the present system of taxing personal property a grotesque situation exists. I also realize the improbability of being able to tax all property equitably. But I believe that an attempt should be made and that it would be made successfully, to tax personal property more justly and equitably, to compel it to bear its just proportion of the burdens of the City Government, instead of shifting the entire burden to real estate, where, in many instances, it is almost unbearable at the present time.

WOMEN VOTED IN NEW JERSEY.

Had the Franchise as Freeholders Until the Constitution of 1807.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Replying to the inquiry in your issue of the 15th inst. as to whether the women of New Jersey ever had the right to vote: They had, and exercised the right to vote up to 1807, when a new Constitution was adopted disfranchising them. This was clearly unconstitutional, the courts having repeatedly held that once having had the right a person will always be protected in it.

Under the common law of England the franchise was a right attached to the freehold, and women as well as men were freeholders. The common law of England was brought to New England by the colonists, and, following English precedent, women voted. For many years the voters of the various States were designated as "persons," "inhabitants," "freeholders," &c., and it was not until long after the adoption of the Federal Constitution that the States began to change the basis of representation from taxation to sex.

The courts have held: "The adoption of the Constitution did not deprive the people of the several colonies of the protection and advantages of the common law."

> Article V. of the Amendments provides: "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law," and this has been construed to mean that "no member of the State shall be disfranchised of any of his rights or privileges unless the matter be adjudged against him upon trial. * * * it must be ascertained judicially that he has forfeited his privileges."

That under the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment "discriminating and partial legislation favoring particular persons or against particular persons of the same class is prohibited. * * * Equality of privilege is a constitutional right of all citizens * * * equality of protection implies equal exemption with others of the same class from all charges and burdens of every kind."

Depriving women of the right to vote violates the State and Federal Constitutions, in that:

> It is a Bill of Attainder, which means the extinction of civil or political rights and capacities, and follows as a matter of course upon conviction and sentence to death. The courts have held: "If a right is lawfully acquired and lawfully possessed under a pre-existing rule of conduct, any law which deprives a person of it is ex post facto and bill of attainder."

The States have ever treated the exclusion from the right to vote as a punishment.

It impairs the obligation of contracts. The United States Supreme Court has held:

> It is well settled that a provision in a State Constitution may be a law impairing the obligation of contracts, as well as one found in an ordinay statute. * * * A State cannot impair substantial rights, and whenever this result is produced the act is within the prohibition of the Constitution and to that extent void.
> If a State adopt a new Constitution and any of its provisions are found to impair the validity of existing rights, such provision will be as much within the prohibition as would a simple act of the Legislature.

It deprives citizens of a valuable property right without "due process of law."

It destroys our republican form of government, the basic principle of which is the equality of all citizens, and government by consent of the governed.

> An unconstitutional act is not law; it confers no rights; it imposes no duties; it affords no potection; it creates no office; it is in legal contemplation as inoperative as though it had never been passed.—Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

ITALIAN MAIL BOXES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read in yesterday's issue of your editorial page the suggestion made by "A Reader of The Review," and, if you will allow me space, I shall take the liberty of making another suggestion as to an apparatus for delivering and collecting mail. I saw it in operation in Milan and Genoa, Italy, and I think it is exceptionally practical, and it absolutely assures secrecy and privacy, and makes any loss, after mail has left the postman's hands, quite impossible.

The apparatus is situated in the halls or vestibules of apartment houses, &c., and has the appearance of a door, the upper part of which consists of individual letter boxes, one for each tenant, besides which there is a separate box for the collection of mail by the postman.

Each letter box is numbered, and each tenant has his own individual key, which cannot open any of the other boxes. On the other hand, the postman has a single pass-key which he uses all along his route; with one operation of this key he opens all the slits of the boxes, (not the boxes themselves,) as well as the collecting box, and causes to be thrown into view under the slits the names of the tenants.

The postman starts distributing, and as he places anything in the box the tenant is notified automatically by an electric bell in his apartment. This avoids the delays we so often experience under the present systems. At the same time that the tenant is notified by the electric bell a white indicator drops just underneath the slit of the box, so that the tenant who happens to be out at the time mail is distributed, can, as he passes the apparatus, know that mail is in his box, thus avoiding the necessity of opening the same needlessly. The white indicator disappears when mail is withdrawn.

When he has finished distributing, the postman withdraws from the collecting box the mail to be distributed, and then with a touch of the lever at the foot of the apparatus all the slits are closed and the names disappear, leaving visible only the numbers.

The Salvation Army's Case.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the letter on your editorial page of this date, entitled "The Salvation Army Suit," I desire to correct any misapprehension in the mind of the public as to the character of the rival organization by quoting from the opinion of the Appellate Division, handed down on the 30th of December, 1909, as follows:

> It is so clear as to hardly justify discussion that the purpose of the defendant in assuming the names "American Salvation Army" for its organization and "The American War Cry" for its paper, and its adoption of the military titles and the uniforms and its whole scheme of procedure was to take advantage of the long established and widespread public knowledge of the Salvation Army and to receive for itself whatever benefit might flow therefrom. While its object in organizing may have been entirely laudable, its assumption of the physical attributes of its predecessor in the field, with slight and colorable differences, was obviously an imitation and calculated, if not deliberately designed, to deceive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That a man who has made a conspicuous failure in one department of human endeavor may yet make an equally conspicuous success in another is well known.

In view of this fact would it not be well if the President turned his attention to securing a government of the few by and for the benefit of the many, the object for which some of us think he was elected, in place of the present one, a government of the many by and for the benefit of the few?

The reputation of having been the head of a National, in contradistinction to party, Administration is one that could be well be coveted by a much greater man than Mr. Taft.

A SAFE INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Mrs. Rice's Society Presenting Arguments to Fire Commissioner and Mayor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I earnestly request the privilege of saying a few words in reference to a "Fourth of July" address made last night at our annual meeting by Alderman Courtlandt Nicoll.

Mr. Nicoll first spoke feelingly of the heavy cost of each recurring celebration of the Fourth, and referred to his proposed ordinances, which he had introduced in the hope of saving our boys and girls from mutilation and death. Remarking that he scarcely believed that these ordinances would be reported out in time to affect the next National holiday, Mr. Nicoll proceeded to say that even without new enactment, the city could be protected from the usual casualties if permits to sell fireworks were not granted, the power to withhold them resting in the hands of the Fire Commissioner. The Mayor's letter, Mr. Nicoll went on, in which he touched upon the sympathy which he felt for the boy's desire to shoot off firecrackers, might perhaps result in the issuance of these permits again, but we hope that his Honor, who has stated that he wants information on the subject, will eventually decide on a safe and sane Independence Day. The Mayor, (Mr. Nicoll said in effect,) carefully considers every matter himself, but he will undoubtedly be impressed by public opinion—therefore let all who deplore the heavy casualties of the Fourth beg the mediation of those who are acquainted with his Honor; let us call upon him, and write, and 'phone to his secretary—let us (he added, jokingly,) make Mayor Gaynor's life miserable until he is convinced.

I need scarcely assure you, Mr. Editor, that no effort to urge our cause upon Mr. Gaynor will be made either by Mr. Nicoll, by the members of our society, or by myself. I do not believe that Mr. Nicoll has ever personally brought the measure in which he is so deeply interested to the attention of his Honor, and no one connected with our society has ever done more than present certain material to the Fire Commissioner—to whom Mayor Gaynor had referred the matter—with the request that he give it due consideration and afterward transmit it with other letters and material to Mr. Gaynor. We shall hopefully await the decision that means so much to our boys and girls, but neither by visits, correspondence, nor telephoning shall we endeavor to urge upon the executive power our appeal for safety and sanity in the observance of the Fourth. Our material is now before Mr. Gaynor, and if he will glance over it he will see that the Governors of twenty-three States of the Union have graciously consented to become members of a National committee for the promotion of a safe and sane Fourth of July, that forty-five Mayors of various cities approve our efforts in that direction, and that scores of public officials from the Atlantic to the Pacific have put themselves on record as being enthusiastically in favor of this reform. Any word or comment from us would be superfluous. No appeal from private individuals, or from any organization could be classed with this splendid mass of patriotic and authoritative opinion. We regret, of course, that the Empire City should be among the last to fall into the ranks of reform—all loyal New Yorkers must regret it—but we can do nothing but respectfully await the decision of the Mayor on which depends so much.

In conclusion, it may be interesting to state that in New York City alone, during the last three celebrations of the Fourth of July, 1,339 persons have been killed or injured, a number far in excess of the casualties recorded in seven famous Revolutionary battles—Lexington, Bunker Hill, Fort Moultrie, White Plains, Fort Washington, Monmouth, and Cowpens. These figures representing our city's losses touch us closely, especially when we reflect that most of the victims were little children. As for the total recorded loss of the whole country during the last seven celebrations of Independence Day, it shows a number of casualties almost thirty-one times as great as those of the abovementioned battles—34,603, as compared with 1,119.

PEARY BEFORE CONGRESS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To just an ordinary mind not oppressed, as some of our Congressmen are, by affairs of State, several reasons would naturally suggest themselves to explain why Commander Peary made so much better time after Capt. Bartlett left him.

Previous to Capt. Bartlett's departure there was probably no occasion for haste. Prudence would dictate at the outset a slower rate of travel for the purpose of conserving the strength of the small party, which was finally to make a dash for the pole.

The size of the party at first was not conducive to speed, even if speed at that stage of the game had been essential, which it probably was not.

With as light a load as could be carried, and the party reduced to the minimum of safety, there was, of course, necessity for as much speed as possible, as everything absolutely depended upon quick transit between the point at which Capt. Bartlett left and the pole, if that goal was to be reached at all.

It can be imagined without much difficulty that Peary exerted all his strength and forced his party and his dogs to the limit in order not to fail to accomplish his purpose.

Twenty-six miles a day on an average under such conditions would not seem to be excessive speed to keep up for a week, and that was about the length of time that Peary spent going and coming while making the final dash.

Whether Commander Peary will consider it worth his while to explain this matter for the benefit of the Congressmen who are opposed to recognizing his great feat in a substantial manner, of course, nobody knows.

There is no likelihood that the Congressmen who are clamoring for Peary's records would know any more about the matter after they had seen them than they do now.

With the world at large ready to recognize and honor Commander Peary, it is a disgrace that the Representatives of his own country should discredit him in the way that a subcommittee of Congress has recently done.

If these Congressmen think that the people of the country are behind them in this matter they are very much mistaken.

GOOD MANNERS.

What a jar
To the southern star!
What a knock
To the Gibraltar rock
Of good manners which
North, South, East, West,
And all the rest!
Oh, say,
Only the other day
F. Hopkinson Smith
Was punching the pith
Out of the New York bunch
As hadn't a hunch
On manners as is manners,
And, say,
The way he poked them in the slats
Drove the barbarians to their flats.
And now—
Wow,
Listen to what
And right out in meetin', too, where all
May hear the call
Of the wild and woolly Hatch
Doing his scratch.
By heck, let anybody forget
Etiquette
In this here town,
And if he ain't called down
Good and hard
In regard
To the same,
First, Mr. Smith hopped on the town
Insisting that its manners
Were so darn bad
They made him sad
And sigh for his savannas.
Next, Mr. Smith went up against
When, lo, by gum,
Now,
What's manners?
Who shall say
My scat,
Where is little old New York at?

SMALL BOY BESIEGED CIRCUS—AND GOT IN

MEANT TO ENTERTAIN THEM

But Fifty-odd Visitors Lost Themselves Among the Animal Cages, and Some May Be There Yet.

The youthful reception committee which usually supervises the arrival of the circus, but which was cheated out of that privilege Saturday night by the lateness of the hour, was on hand at Madison Square Garden yesterday to see that the animals had arrived all right. The committee appeared with some misgivings, however, as to its own reception. But "Alf" Ringling, one of the owners of the Barnum & Bailey Show, endeared himself to the youngsters by instructing the doorkeeper to let the lads in.

Into the arena they trooped, some fifty strong, with yells of delight. Mr. Ringling had intended to escort the small committeemen over the Garden, but, once inside, the fifty scattered all over the place, and when the caretakers closed the building late last night they were by no means certain that the last small visitor had left.

There was much for the lads to see, and they saw it all, from the "chattering, chittering, chortling cheetah" to old Babe, the wagon-pushing elephant, and Bumbeeno, the baby giraffe.

And then, too, there were the circus riders and the acrobats, and that wonderful man who stands up in the Garden rafters and plunges down a chute, head first, in the "leap of death." "Desperado," they call him, and the small boys shuddered as they looked at him yesterday, walking around the arena "just like an ordinary man," directing the work of putting up the wooden chute down which he will plunge later in the week.

Mr. Ringling had instructed the trainers and performers to be nice to the small visitors, and they told the youngsters stories that made their eyes bulge. The elephant keepers who have charge of forty of the big brutes, some with great ivory tusks tipped with brass knobs, others tuskless, but interesting, nevertheless, and each with a history, told some of their stories to the lads. How Caliph, one of the big fellows, with tusks six feet long, had once saved his keeper's life when another elephant tried to trample him to death, proved an absorbing tale, but even more enthralling were the stories of killings committed by the big animals, who swung back and forth from side to side as though they were standing in a rocking ship.

John Patterson, who has charge of the monkeys, entertained a crowd of youngsters. Pat, the chimpanzee, whose face, the press agents say, "would stop a clock," but whose disposition is as gentle as that of the proverbial lamb, made friends with the boys right away. Pat's education has only just begun. He was obtained several months ago from a missionary named Boyd, in Washington, Penn. Mr. Boyd had just returned from Africa, and brought Pat along as a pet. The chimpanzee attracted so much attention in Washington, Penn., that the circus people heard of him.

Pat was dressed in a khaki uniform yesterday and wore a pair of heavy soled shoes, which pounded over the floor when he walked, for Pat can walk very well, in spite of the fact that he is a bit pigeon-toed. He walked around with several of the youthful committeemen yesterday, apparently enjoying the stroll among the animal cages just as much as the lads themselves. They vied with one another, holding Pat's hand as they walked, and Mr. Patterson saw to it that each lad got a chance to grasp Pat's hand at least once.

Patterson says the chimpanzee laughs whenever he sees a funny picture, and that his bump of humor is well developed. The boys were quite willing to believe this yesterday, for Pat appeared to be laughing most of the time.

The baby giraff made a great hit with the young committeemen. Bumbeeno was with its mother, Mary, in a big box-like wagon in the middle of the arena. Mary looked as though she would like very much to stretch her neck again, for the wagon top was quite low. But little Bumbeeno was having a fine time, and, with the exception of Pat, was about the only really contented animal in the show. That train ride from Bridgeport and the tramp down from Mott Haven seemed to have ruffled the tempers of most of the animals, and they were still in ill humor yesterday. The lions and tigers were roaring in a really terrifying manner, and the youngsters avoided that part of the Garden, fearing lest a bar in one of the cages should be loose.

There was a stampede of the elephants on the Fourth Avenue side of the Garden about 1 o'clock yesterday morning. With Babe in the lead, the elephants were approaching the Garden entrance when a battery of camera men, posted on a pile of lumber near the door, set off their flash lights. There was a blinding flash, which lit up the street for a block or so. Babe lifted her trunk and trumpeted, and then bolted through the doorway into the Garden.

The elephant just behind her was even more excited than Babe. He was one of those with tusks. This elephant also tried to make the door, but missed it and lurched against the heavy wooden frame. Turning quickly the big beast started across Fourth Avenue. The rest of the herd broke into a run and began to scatter in all directions. A moment before they had been marching, each with its trunk clasped firmly to the tail of the one in front.

Half a dozen keepers began to yell and to jab their iron hooks into the ears of their frightened animals. It was half an hour later before order was restored and all the elephants were safely housed. None of them got very far away.

HIPPODROMES IN OTHER CITIES

The Shuberts announced yesterday that a corporation had been organized between the New York Hippodrome Company, consisting of the Shuberts and Messrs. Chesebrough & Black, with some Western capital, for the purpose of building duplicates of the New York Hippodrome in Boston and Chicago. A building has been obtained already in Philadelphia, which, with the addition of a tank, can be used for hippodrome purposes.

It is planned to place the New York Hippodrome shows in these cities, using the five that already have been produced here. "Neptune's Daughter" and the ballet that accompanied that spectacle, will probably be shown first in Chicago. "Pioneer Days" and "The Ballet of Birds" will be the opening Boston show, and "A Trip to Japan" and "The Ballet of Jewels" will be transferred to Philadelphia.

Marceline, the Hippodrome clown, will go on tour, and "Slivers" Oakley will be engaged for the local playhouse. Arthur Voegtlin will have charge of the scenic effects of all the houses, and R. H. Burnside also will be interested in the new project.

REGAINS GEM TO LOSE IT.

Baron Hans von Babbinger-Seidenberg of Germany, from whom $3,000 worth of black diamond rings were stolen on Feb. 5 last, and who afterward recovered them, following the arrest of a Sixth Avenue bartender who had become friendly with his valet, reported last night at the Plaza, where he is staying, that one of the black pearls had again disappeared.

The police have not been notified, for this time the gem in question is thought not to have been stolen, but lost by the Baron on last Saturday night, while he was supping with friends after the theatre.

On March 17 the Baron visited Supreme Court, Criminal Trial Term, pending the trial of the bartender, who was arrested and indicted on a grand larceny charge, for having taken the two gems from the valet. He identified the rings at this time, and they were returned to him, as the Baron asserted that he was in a hurry to get back home.

The diamond rings are heirlooms, and are said to be very old. The gem which was lost was surrounded by two groups of small diamonds. The jewel was in the ring when the Baron left the Plaza on Saturday evening, but when he returned home that night it was missing.

JAMES J. HOGAN DEAD; WAS FOOTBALL STAR

SANK AFTER RALLYING

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 20.—James J. Hogan, a former Yale football Captain and former Deputy Commissioner under Commissioner W. H. Edwards of the Street Cleaning Department of New York City, died early this morning at a private hospital in this city, to which he was removed from his parents' home in Torrington yesterday afternoon.

An acute attack of uraemia, induced by Bright's disease, from which he had suffered for about a year, and which became aggravated from an attack of the grip while he was at work in New York in January, was given by Dr. F. H. Whittemore, one of the attending physicians, as the cause of death.

Mr. Hogan was conscious up to within a few minutes of his death. His mother, a brother, and a sister had accompanied him from Torrington to New Haven and were at his bedside when he died. Yesterday and the day previous he had given indications of a rally, and his condition was reported to give hopes for his ultimate recovery. As a result of the rally it was deemed advisable to remove him from his parents' home in Torrington to this city, so that he could be treated at a private hospital. The rally, however, was followed by an attack of uraemia and death followed very shortly afterward.

James J. Hogan, till a little over a year ago, was known as one of the best football players of recent times. On Jan. 1, 1909, he entered the Street Cleaning Department as a Deputy Commissioner, and for over twelve months helped Commissioner Edwards to make records in that work, especially regarding snow removal, which won from Mayor Gaynor praise for football men. He resigned his post in the middle of January last and intended to resume the practice of law with the firm of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, 62 Cedar Street.

Mr. Hogan was Irish by birth, having been born at Glenhame, Tipperary, thirty-six years ago. He came to this country with his parents when a boy of five and was educated at Phillips Exeter Academy. Here his cheerful disposition won him popularity among his comrades, and his skill at football made him Captain of the school team in the year of his graduation.

He entered the academic department of Yale with the Class of '05 and joined the university team as a freshman. Throughout his college course he was one of the mainstays of his side, and achieved a great reputation as a tackle. It was no rare thing for him to gain ten or fifteen yards with half his opponents' rush line hanging on his back. His hard work and determination never slackened in the stiffest of games. He weighed 206 pounds when he first donned the "Y," and his playing weight did not vary much from this for several years.

In his last year he was the Captain of the university team and was also selected for a place in the All-American combination. He represented Yale on the track, and was a member of the Skull and Bones Society as well as a number of other college associations. After graduation he attended the Columbia Law School and was admitted to the bar after two years' study. He then entered the United States District Attorney's office.

When Commissioner Edwards took charge of the Street Cleaning Department he invited Mr. Hogan to assist him. The Winter was a hard one, and was also made memorable by the discovery of a grafting system by which some of the snow removal contractors and the department's foremen combined to rob the city of large sums. Mr. Hogan was the Commissioner's right hand man in putting a stop to these practices, and afterward helped in the task of cleaning up the snow with scratch forces hurriedly got together by the department.

He made an excellent record for himself in the city's service, but seems to have overtaxed himself. Soon after resigning he was taken ill with kidney trouble. It was supposed that the strain he underwent on the gridiron may have affected him, and the exposure to which he was subjected in the early part of this Winter in superintending the removal of the snow caused acute disease to supervene. Ten days ago he went home to his parents at Torrington, and when the resources of the local doctors were exhausted, Dr. Frank Whittemore, a specialist, was summoned from New York.

After three days' hard work it was decided that he was a trifle better, and that if he could be moved to a first-class modern hospital for special treatment he had a fighting chance. Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., his old college friend, ordered a special train for him and himself superintended his removal to New Haven. He was taken on Saturday afternoon to the Elm City Hospital thoroughly tired with the journey. However no immediate danger was expected till he took a sudden turn for the worst at midnight. He died at 10:30 yesterday morning.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards, speaking last night of Mr. Hogan, said: "He was my Deputy for Manhattan in active charge of the work on the streets and in the stables. He rendered most efficient service, and was of the finest type of young man. He threw himself heart and soul into the work of the department and only left it on account of an unusually good offer to return to the law. The men realized that he treated them fairly and justly, and that if he wanted them to work hard he worked hard himself."

The Commissioner will attend the funeral on behalf of the department.

JACOB NEWSTEAD BURIED.

Six thousand persons, representing every shade of political faith and many organizations, headed by ex-Gov. Odell, attended the funeral yesterday morning of Jacob A. Newstead, late Republican leader of the Fourth Assembly District.

Services were held at 10 o'clock at the headquarters of the Jacob A. Newstead Association, 464 Grand Street, but the crush of people was so heavy that only a few could get into the rooms, and the street was lined with several thousands.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Lissman of the Harlem Temple, 130th Street and Seventh Avenue, conducted the short service and delivered a eulogy.

After the services the procession marched through Grand to Broome Street, thence to Pitt Street, and by the headquarters, then over the Williamsburg Bridge to Mount Neboh Cemetery. Several thousand were in line. Ten members of the Republican County Committee, acting as honorary pallbearers, followed afoot close behind the hearse. In this committee were Samuel S. Koenig, Secretary of State; Sheriff John S. Shea, James E. March, John Boyle, Jr., Secretary of the County Committee; George Husch, Eli Rosenberg, Alderman Tristam B. NEW SUTRO PLAYLET.

Alfred Sutro's one-act play, "A Maker of Men," will be put on at the Garrick Theatre to-night as a curtain-raiser to the farce, "The Girl He Couldn't Leave Behind Him." Hattie Williams and Ernest Lawford will have the principal parts.

"A Maker of Men" concerns a man and his wife who live in a modest house in an obscure street in London. The husband is expecting a letter from the banking firm which employs him announcing that he has been made manager of a branch bank at double his ordinary salary. The letter comes, but it states that the place has been given to a younger man.

The husband, discouraged, complains of his inability to give to his wife those things that her sisters enjoy. Then the wife discloses to him that she possesses more than her wealthy sisters of things that they cannot have.

SCHUMANN'S CENTENNIAL.

The one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Robert Schumann occurs this year, but some time after the ordinary concert season in New York has run its course. Walter Damrosch wished to honor the date, but he was forced to celebrate it yesterday at the concert of the New York Symphony Society at The New Theatre, for the simple reason that this was the last subscription concert which this society will give during the current season.

The programme was entirely made up of compositions by Schumann, and included the first symphony, the joyous character of which was particularly suited to yesterday's Springlike atmosphere; an arrangement made for violoncello by Paul Kefer, and played by him; the celebrated "Träumerei," arranged for and played by the string orchestra, and finally excerpts from the incidental music which Schumann wrote for Byron's dramatic poem "Manfred."

These selections included the overture, the Invocation of the Alpine Fay, Manfred's address to Astarte, and the death of Manfred. Mr. Walter Hamden read passages of the poem which go with the music of the last two excerpts from the score.

Victor Herbert or Walter Damrosch May Succeed Him as Orchestra Director

PITTSBURG, March 20.—"My contract with the Pittsburg Orchestra is now closing, and I do not intend it to be renewed. Matters here are much in the air, and, well, I do not care to talk of the matter further," said Emil Paur, director of the Pittsburg Orchestra for the past six years.

The intention of Paur to leave Pittsburg is not news to many of the larger subscribers, who seek the raising of a large endowment fund for the orchestra to place it on a permanent basis. Already there is a movement on foot to secure either Victor Herbert or Walter Damrosch for the orchestra.

BEGINS LONG DRIVE TO ATLANTIC CITY

ROADS IN POOR CONDITION

Will Start Second Stage of Long Run This Morning—Will Remain for Horse Show.

Starting from the Holland House a few minutes after 8 o'clock yesterday morning Paul A. Sorg, the well-known horse exhibitor, began a journey over the New Jersey roads which will not end until sundown to-night, by which time he expects to be in Atlantic City. Mr. Sorg is driving a coach and four from New York to Atlantic City, a distance of 134 miles, in two days. Sixteen relays of horses will be used during the trip, which is the first ever attempted. Alfred G. Vanderbilt arranged a coaching trip from New York to Narragansett Pier, R. I., last year, but he was accompanied by half a dozen of the best four-in-hand drivers in the country, who relieved each other with the reins. Mr. Sorg expects to drive the entire distance himself, in which event he will establish a record. He is, however, accompanied by Charles A. Baudouine, a clever amateur whip, who will be called upon if necessary, and the result of the trip is awaited with great interest by not only Mr. Sorg's friends, but also by the horse world.

Mr. Sorg met his party early yesterday morning at the Holland House, where a special hunt breakfast was served. After the breakfast the guests, numbering nine, clambered aboard the coach Old Sport, which will be driven the entire journey. Mr. Sorg took his seat on the box with Mr. Baudouine on the adjoining seat. The other seven passengers occupied seats on the top of the coach, the inside being used for the baggage. When all was ready the guard blew the post horn gallop on the horn, and the four high-stepping bays started down Fifth Avenue on the long journey.

The coach reached the Staten Island Ferry in good time, and was driven on to the ferryboat. Upon arriving at St. George, S. I., the first change was made. A cock horse was added to the regular four to help the coach over the Staten Island hills to New Dorp, where the second change of horses took place. The roads were somewhat heavy, but the party made excellent time. The sun, which by this time was warm, made the journey very agreeable. The third change was made at Tottenville, S. I., and the fourth relay was met at Wickatunk, N. J. Mr. Sorg drove the teams at a good rate during the entire distance, and made changes at Freehold and Farmingdale. From the latter point the coach was driven to Lakewood, where the party stopped for the night at the Laurel House.

The coach arrived at the Laurel House at 3:21 P. M., the journey from New York, a distance of 69½ miles, occupying 7 hours and 21 minutes, or nearly ten miles an hour. The coaching party remained in Lakewood last night, and will begin the second stage of the journey early this morning. It is expected that the coach will reach Atlantic City before sundown to-night, in spite of the fact that the roads between Lakewood and Atlantic City are reported to be in poor condition.

The trip to-day will be through the following points, at each of which will be a fresh relay of horses: Toms River, 9¼ miles; Forked River, 3¼ miles; Manahawken, 10 miles; Tuckerton, 9 miles; New Gretna, 6 miles; Port Republic, 7 miles; Absecon, 8 miles, and to Atlantic City, 9 miles. The total distance of the second stage of the journey will be 64 miles, making an aggregate mileage for the entire trip of 133½ miles.

In addition to Charles A. Baudouine the guests of Mr. Sorg are: J. D. Armstrong, D. H. Gaines, E. W. Griffith, N. M. Smith, R. W. Brixey, G. L. McHose, Dr. J. P. McGowan, and H. P. Martin. The party will stay at Atlantic City during the horse show, which opens Wednesday and continues until Saturday night. Mr. Sorg has entered a number of harness horses in the show, which will compete against many of the best horses in the country.

HOW TENNEY BROKE INTO BIG BASEBALL

Thought Boston Managers Were Joking When They Offered Him Money to Play.

By FRED TENNEY,
Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN, Texas, March 20.—During my baseball career I have been asked many times what induced me to take up baseball as a means of livelihood. My answer to that question has always been that I was delighted at the idea of some one being willing to pay me for doing what I loved. While I was at college I became quite proficient as a player, and naturally always wondered if I really could play well enough to hold a job on a major League team.

In June, 1894, during the week of commencement exercises at Brown University, I received a telephone message from Manager Selee of the Boston Club saying that all his catchers were disabled, and would I come up the next day to help them out. I had known them all for several years, and was only too glad to play with them, as it would give me the long-sought-for opportunity of finding out just how fast baseball was played in the League, and whether I could hold up my end of it. I went up to Boston the next day and caught five innings of the game, and was getting along very nicely when I was unfortunate enough to get a foul tip on the forefinger of my throwing hand, breaking it at the second joint. That accident forced me out of the game, and I knew that I would not be able to play again for a month. This was quite serious for me, as I figured on making enough money in the Summer vacation through ball playing to pay my expenses for the rest of the year.

I was feeling pretty blue over the outlook for an enforced month's idleness, but after I got my finger dressed Manager Selee told me that Mr. Billings, one of the owners of the club, wanted to make an appointment to see me at his office. When I got there he told me that he had been watching my work for some time past, and from the showing I had made in the game I had caught for them he had been empowered to offer me a contract calling for $300 a month, dating from that day.

I did not then know how they did business in the big Leagues, and $300 looked like a young fortune to me, but I could not understand why they should be willing to give me all that money when I had just broken my finger and would not be able to play for a month. Naturally I thought they were trying to have a little joke with me, and I concluded that I could do a little kidding myself. So I thought I would call their bluff by asking for some advance money. I screwed up my courage and asked Mr. Billings whether, if I signed the contract at once, I could get some advance money. He asked me how much I wanted, and I thought I would mention a big sum in order to call their bluff good and strong. So I said $150. He consulted with Mr. Conant, another Director, and said that I could have the money all right, and asked me how I would like to have it—cash or check. I thought they were going pretty far with their joke, but considered that I could go as far as they, so replied that I would take half cash and half in check, and he immediately wrote out a check for $75, counted out $75 in cash, shoved the contract over to me to sign, laying the cash and check beside it. I thought surely this must be stage money until I got hold of it; then it looked perfectly good, and I could find no flaw in the looks of the check. I signed the contract and put the money and check in the most inaccessible inside pocket I could find. I had never seen as much money all at once in my life before, and was so scared that I would lose it that I was feeling for that roll every ten steps on my way down the street.

That is how I broke into the League, and in the years that have followed I have never regretted signing that first contract.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, March 20.—The Giants won another game from Houston this afternoon, with all the regulars in the line-up. The score was: New York, 6; Houston, 1. The Texans brought out all their best pitchers, and seriously intended to give McGraw a drubbing. He went right back at them by pitching Raymond and Ames, both of whom are in excellent shape. They allowed but three hits between them, and all of those were scratches. The Houston team scored one run, which was the result of a scratch hit off Raymond. There was a runner on first, and he had started to steal second. The next batter hit toward second, and the out would have been easy but for the fact that Doyle had gone to cover the bag. That sent the first runner to third, and from there he socred on a bad throw to second.

The Giants scored three runs in the third inning. Raymond and Meyers were both hit by the pitcher, and Devore walked. Doyle was also given a base on balls, forcing in Meyers. Murray then drove a long fly to right, and Raymond scored on the out. Devore and Doyle started to advance on the play, and while they were trying to catch Larry between first and second Devore kept on running and scored. They made two more in the seventh on successive hits by Ames, Devore, and Murray. The score:

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 20.—Getaway day for the Brooklyn team was the hottest of the season here, and the game was a listless affair, with the Yannigans putting it all over the Regulars. The score was 14 to 5. Barney Dreyfuss, who was in the stand with Stanley Robinson and Fred Clarke, said the Dodgers needed better fighting qualities than they were showing. Neither Scanlon nor McIntyre cut loose to-day, both lobbing up the ball to give the Colts batting practice. They clouted the ball hard for twenty-one hits, with a total of twenty-nine bases. The only Regulars to show any pepper at the bat were Hunter and McMillan. The former annexed another homer, while the Rabbit made two doubles. Clarke has thirty men in the party that came here to-day, and they will start practice at 9:30 sharp to-morrow morning. The Brooklyns depart for Memphis at 1:30 in the afternoon, but will do no morning work. The Boston-Cincinnati game resulted in a victory for the Cincinnatis, 16 to 4. The Brooklyn score:

R. H. E.

Fairmont's Big Boxing Card.

Thirty-six rounds of high-class boxing comprises the programme at the Fairmont Athletic Club to-morrow night. Dave Ryan of Brooklyn, a hard-hitting welterweight, will engage Young Loughrey of Philadelphia for ten rounds. Loughrey is said to be in particularly good shape at the present time, and has been winning all of his recent battles by the knockout route. The preliminary bouts have been arranged with a great deal of care. Young Ketchel and Mike Grady for eight rounds, Eddie Toy vs. Kid Gleason for eight rounds, and Charlie Lawrence and Bill Donovan will furnish the semi-final of ten rounds.

The Fairmont Club will give a free show to its members on March 31.

New Arrivals to Have Tryout To-day with Georgia University.

Special to The New York Times.

ATHENS, Ga., March 20.—The training squad of the New York Highlanders is now complete, Criger, Kleinow, and Hemphill having arrived from Hot Springs late this afternoon. Kleinow and Hemphill remained at the bath resort for three weeks, but Criger came away after a ten days' visit. The veteran catcher secured from St. Louis responded so well to treatment that he thought he would be as well off in Georgia as in Arkansas. Here he can practice as much as he pleases; in Hot Springs the unattached players have to snatch odd hours on the lots when the members of the big League clubs who control the parks are not exercising.

Criger hopes to have a good year in New York. He is not yet ready for the opening of the season, but he declares he feels stronger than for several Springs past. He is a trifle heavier than usual, and the weight, he says, has improved his strength. Kleinow, according to Criger and Hemphill, will show the boys something this afternoon.

All last season the red-haired backstop of the Highlanders was bothered with a bad arm. The old soreness has not put in an appearance this year. Kleinow has tested it well, for he caught a number of games against Brooklyn and Cincinnati at Hot Springs. From outward appearances Hemphill looks as fresh as when he joined the club in 1908. That year he spent three weeks at the baths, and proved one of the most valuable men on the team. He attributes last season's indifferent showing to the fact of a bad getaway, directly responsible to skipping Hot Springs for the first time in several seasons.

To-morrow afternoon the new arrivals will be tried out against the University of Georgia. Stallings will give both Regulars and Yannigans a chance during the nine innings. Foster does not expect to be able to play on account of a severe cold in the head. To-morrow morning Criger will assume absolute command of the young pitchers. With four catchers to work them out, the sore arms of the twirling staff should soon disappear.

Baseball Practice at N. Y. U.

Another week's practice will determine largely what men are to represent New York University in the first baseball game, which will be played with Webb Academy on Ohio Field on April 1. Coach McPhillips is keeping his men hard at work in his efofrts to turn out a winning nine, and it is probable that he will insist on practice continuing daily throughout the Easter vacation. The following games for the second team have been arranged: Columbia Freshmen, De Witt Clinton, Cathedral College, Boys' High School, Knickerbocker Field Club, and the Larchmont Hose Company. No freshman team will be organized at New York University this year, the coach having decided to utilize all good men on the two college teams. The game between New York University and the New York Athletic Club, scheduled for May 30, has been canceled on account of the latter club's determination to give up baseball. A game with Montclair Athletic Club has been arranged in its place.

OUTDOOR WORK AT COLUMBIA.

Preparation for Athletic Schedules to Begin This Week.

This week will see the final change in the athletic work at Columbia from the indoor sports to the preparation for the first games on the Spring schedules. Practically all the teams in the outdoor sports will be out before the end of the week, in spite of the approaching holidays. Baseball practice has already started on South Field, the soccer team has played two games on its intercollegiate schedule, the lacrosse squad has made a start, and the track and tennis teams are expected to take to the outdoor track and courts beore the week ends.

The prospects for a good baseball team are certainly brighter than they have been for several years. In the first place, the squad with which Coach Fultz has been working since he started in with the Light Blue and White team this Spring is far larger than in former years, and, in the second place, they have, in a professional coach and an enlarged diamond far greater facilities for developing a representative nine.

Bernie Wefers hopes to get his track men out on the cinder path at least by Saturday of this week, by which time it is thought that the field will be ready for this form of athletics. Long-distance men have already started some preliminary practice on Riverside Drive. With an early start and his men unhampered by being declared ineligible, the team has a good chance to make a fair showing.

The rolling and smoothing of the tennis courts on South Field have been left to the last, as all the attention has been put on the main field, to get it into playing condition for the baseball and soccer games. This will be the lacrosse team's last week of practice before its first game, and, judging from the work done by the squad last week, it is not going to lose any chances to get all the experience possible. Next Saturday it will meet C. C. N. Y. on South Field.

OXFORD IS FAVORITE.

Dark Blue Crew Expected to Defeat Cambridge in Boat Race.

LONDON, March 20.—The annual boat race which takes place Wednesday between Oxford and Cambridge promises one of the most exciting contests of recent years, fully maintaining the traditional popularity of the struggle between the universities. Training has virtually been completed, and the best judges are reluctant to indulge in predictions as to the result. The betting has been in favor of Oxford, but the Cantabs have improved so much of late that the betting is now about even.

Oxford won last year in a nerve-racking struggle by thre and one-half lengths, but only seven of the men who took part in the event on that occasion are engaged this year. Oxford has the heaviest crew on record, the average weight of the men, excluding the coxswain, being 177 pounds, against the Cantabs' average of 171¾. Besides the advantage in weight, the Oxonians appear to work better together; but Cambridge is a fine, smart crew, with lively action, and is certain to give the opposing crew a great race.

In the trials Oxford has achieved the faster time for the full course by several seconds, and the race on Wednesday is generally expected to be a repetition of last year's, when the result was a close contest for half the distance. Then the Dark Blues' weight and strength began to tell and they drew away at the end.

Play Soccer Game with Ten Men.

After he had scored their first goal in the beginning of the National League soccer fixture at Marquette Oval in Brooklyn yesterday the Brooklyns were deprived of the services of D. Stuart, centre forward, whose weak knee was wrenched within ten minutes of the start. No substitutes being allowed under the rules the home team played the balance of the game with ten men, and ultimately lost the game by the escore of 3 goals to 2.

At Van Cortlandt Park yesterday the Camerons defeated the eleven of the Columbia Oval Football Club in an Amateur League championship game by the score of 3 goals to 0. The teams were well matched in the first half and neither side was able to score.

In the replayed State Cup tie game between Bronx United and Clan MacKenzie, which took place at Van Cortlandt Park yesterday, Bronx United won by the score of 1 goal to 0. The winners are paired with the Critchleys in the second round.

The Critchleys of Brooklyn journeyed to Astoria for their Amateur League game with the Astoria Independents yesterday, and won by the score of 4 goals to 0. T. Dewar shot the only goal for the Critchleys in the first half.

The Week's Boxing Attractions.

The boxing clubs will offer several contests this week, the opening bill being scheduled tonight at the Olympic Athletic Club, where Sailor Burke will meet Montana Jack Sullivan. The latter has been substituted for Andy Morris of Boston. Sullivan recently fought a ten-round draw with Morris in Boston. The Bedford Athletic Club of Brooklyn will offer a big bill this evening, consisting of half a dozen six-round bouts.

Charley Griffin of Australia will make his reappearance at the National Sporting Club on Tuesday night against Maxey Long of Boston. The weekly stag at the Avon Athletic Club in Brooklyn will have Knockout Brown and Marty Hafron in a ten-round go on Wednesday night. An all-star bill is promised at the Long Acre Athletic Association on Thursday night.

BURKE CAPTURES MOTT HAVEN EVENT

Not only did W. R. Burke of the Mott Haven Athletic Club win the handicap invitation run of his club yesterday, over a five-and-a-half-mile course in the Bronx, but he also annexed the fast-time prize, covering the distance in 31:42, which beat the best performance of two of the cracks of the Metropolitan district, Joe Malone, who hails from the Mohawk A. C., and "Win" Bailey of the New York A. C. Both of these athletes were on scratch in the event, and neither showed to his best advantage. Bailey came home in forty-fifth position and Malone was eighty-fourth. Bailey's time was a trifle over half a minute slower than that of the winner of the event. The novice trophy went to J. J. Short of McCaddin Lyceum, who started with the 4:15 men. The Mott Haven A. C. also came to the front in the race for the point trophy, the total being 38, as against 40 for the Glencoe A. C., 122 for the Mohawks, and 222 for the Irish-American A. C.

H. Jameson of the Glencoe A. C. finished second to Burke, and G. M. Fitzgibbon of the Irish-American A. C. crossed the line in third position. He was disqualified later, however, as he was accused of cutting the course, or rather running the old course of the club, which is shorter than the new, and finally he admitted this. This gave the place to F. McCullough of the Glencoe A. C.

The event brought out a large field of starters, 148 men being on the mark when sent away by John J. McHugh. The start was made at the Fairmount Athletic Club and the course led over 138th Street to Gerard Avenue, up Gerard Avenue to Jerome, and along the latter to 175th Street. The route then led east on 175th Street to the Concourse and down the Concourse into Mott Avenue, as far as 148th Street, across the latter to Morris Avenue, and down Morris Avenue to the Mott Haven Clubhouse. The distance was about five and a half miles. The order of finish:

POLO SEASON OPENS.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 20.—A hard preliminary game prior to the first game of the polo carnival, beginning Tuesday afternoon at Georgian Court, was played this afternoon before a crowd of at least 1,000. The turf was in fine shape, and the atmosphere was ideal for players and ponies. While the game would not have interested experts, it was followed with interest by the spectators. Two picked teams, the New Havens and the Freebooters, clashed, and the former won by 7 to 3.

There were eight periods of play, each consisting of seven and one-half minutes. The skill of the contestants was carefully gauged, but in the last three periods New Haven, through the hard riding and furious driving of Stoddard, drew away from its opponents and made four goals, to one by the Freebooters. The line-up:

Referee—Mr. P. T. Herbert. Timekeeper—Mr. E. W. Elliott.

Small Field Takes Part in Morningside A. C. Road Race.

T. Barden of Yonkers yesterday captured the weekly cross-country run of the Morningside Atheltic Club. Although the weather was ideal for the sport, the field was not quite as large as usual, only thirty-seven runners taking part in the run.

The finish was witnessed by fully 1,000 persons, who thronged both sides of 126th Street, and the athletes were forced to wade through the crowd at the finish line. The course was the regular distance of three and three-quarter miles, of which Manning led for the greater part. Coming down Morningside Avenue about one-half mile from the finish, Barden jumped to the front and held the lead until the finish, winning in easy style from Massey, also of Yonkers, by fully 25 yards. ROWING DELEGATES VISIT BOAT CLUBS

The rowing clubs on the Harlem River entertained several of the officers and members of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen yesterday. During the morning and afternoon several of the crews took a spin up the river, and for the first time this Spring there was a good representation of eights from the various rowing clubs which are just beginning to get in shape for the Harlem regatta on May 30. The visitors were in company with President James Pilkington of the National Association, and impromptu receptions were held at the different boathouses for the guests.

The party included Vice President Charles Priesendanz of Philadelphia, Treasurer Claude R. Zappone of Washington, who landed the National Regatta for the Potomac Boat Club; John P. Coogan of Springfield, Mass.; Henry Penn Burke, Malta Boat Club of Philadelphia, and H. P. Wardwell of Boston. The Nassau Boat Club's centipede and senior eight crews, the Harlem Rowng Club's octopede and centipede crews, together with a score of single and double shells, gave the river the appearance of great activity, and some of the Western delegates remarked on the fact that the Eastern boat clubs were fortunate in being able to get on the water so early in the season, for in places like Detroit and St. Paul the crews do not get down to actual work for another month at least.

A meeting of delegates from all the boat clubs on "scullers' row" was held yesterday to meet Park Commissioner Higgins of the Bronx and discuss the plans for improving McComb's Dam Park. According to the Commissioner's plans the pak in the vicinity of the boat houses will be a place of beauty this Summer. The plan is to build a new bulkhead on the river front and grade and grass the land about the boat houses. Flower beds shrubbery, and walks will be part of the decorations. The oarsmen are very enthusiastic about the improvements, and work will be started this week.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Grain Receipts Heavy, Crop News Conflicting—Provision Stringency Endures—Cotton Mills Curtail.

The action of wheat during the last week was not very pronounced, although at the close prices showed a general loss on both old and new crop deliveries. The decline in the market was due to two conditions. As far as the old crop months were concerned the weakness was due to the fact of continued liberal receipts and a lack of cash demand. The receipts continue large at Western points, and the stocks are not decreasing at all compared with a year ago. Beginning with the first of January the visible supply east of the Rockies this year decreased 3,000,000 bushels, while last year it decreased during the same time 19,000,000 bushels. On the first of January the visible supply east of the Rockies in the United States was in round figures 28,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. This week the visible supply was 11,000,000 bushels less. This shows the effect of the restriction in the exports and the lack of active domestic demand. This condition has brought about a softening in the cash wheat position in all markets, and this is reflected in a weakening in the May delivery.

The new crop deliveries have been influenced by the reports regarding the growing crop. The crop reports have been of all kinds. Some have indicated very serious damage; others apparently limited damage. It seems to be as yet a case of guesswork, although it is evident that in certain portions of the Southwest the condition is not promising.

The weather has been dry and the continued dry weather has been an unfavorable factor. The crop needs throughout the Southwest a heavy rain and more growing weather to give it a favorable start. As long as the dry weather lasts the market is likely to be nervous over the uncertainty. It is stated that a good deal of the unpromising ground is being plowed up and put into oats, as it is not profitable to raise a small crop of wheat where a large crop of corn and oats can be obtained. It is believed that the abandonment on this account will be comparatively large. Generally in other sections of the country reports are fairly promising, and the impression seems to be growing that the total promise for the crop is by no means adverse. Foreign statistics have been a little more bullish during the week. The world's exports for the week ended Thursday were 3,500,000 bushels less than the preceding week, and 4,000,000 bushels less than a year ago. This was due to a heavy falling off in the Argentine exports. The amount of wheat afloat for Europe, however, is fairly liberal, and the foreign markets have not been much disturbed by the decrease in the shipments. There has been, however, some hardening in the foreign markets, but it has not resulted in any interest in American wheat. Some export business has been put through in Manitoba, but the volume has been small.

Corn has been weak with prices slowly working off under the influence of steady liquidation of long corn and the absence of support. The receipts have been liberal and the position of the cash corn has been heavy. The stock at Chicago is nearly 11,000,000 bushels in public and private elevators, against 4,800,000 bushels last year and the stock of contract corn is about five times as large as a year ago. The official visible supply Monday showed a small decrease, 475,000 bushels, and there was a small decrease in Bradstreet's. On the last decline there was a fairly good export business put through, but the advance checked the demand. On the break this week more business has developed. The situation for the time being seems to be one in which the market is dominated by the cash corn position.

The movement of oats values has been much the same as in corn. Prices have slowly worked off, with not a great deal of interest awakened by the decline. The stock is quite steadily increasing and receipts are rather heavy at Western points. The demand for distribution has not been particularly active, and, influenced in part by the decline in corn, the market has sold off. Reports indicate that the weather conditions have been very good so far for the early seeding of oats, and good progress is being made in many sections in all kinds of field work.

The provision market has been decidedly irregular, but without particular change in general conditions. There was a sharp break the early part of the week, owing to the uncovering of stop orders, and the whole market gave way sharply, but there was no increase in the movement of hogs, while the position of cash product remained practically unchanged, and later in the week the decline was about recovered. The situation is still a case of the hog supply, and even at the prices which have been seen, which have been equaled but once or twice in the past forty years, the demand seems to absorb all the available supply of meats and fats.

COTTON.

Cotton conditions during the week did not arouse any decided interest. The early part was a distinct bear raid, accompanied by heavy selling, and some of the leading interests put on the market between 40,000 and 50,000 bales of cotton. It was very generally stated that this cotton was for large operators, who were ready to take an aggressive stand against the market, and also in part for spot interests, who were buying cotton at the South to bring here to tender on the May deliveries. The cotton was taken, however, apparently by the bull party, and the floor leaders of the party were the conspicuous buyers. The decline which followed this heavy selling was recovered, and the market advanced to higher levels. The high point of February was touched, and the market showed an unexpected steadiness in view of the selling.

The position in the May delivery is looked upon as purely a technical one. Operations in this month seem to be a case of a struggle between the big bull operators on the one side, and some of the important spot interests on the other. During the week the statement was given out, with apparently a fair backing, that while 50,000 to 60,000 bales of New York cotton would be shipped to the other side, there would be nearly as much cotton brought back from the other side for the purpose of tendering on the New York May contract. This report was viewed from two different standpoints. One was the possibility that the cotton might be brought back here at a small loss or possibly a small profit, owing to the difference in grades and premiums, while the other standpoint was that the report reflected the straits of the bear party and the necessity it was under in order to prevent being very severely squeezed. The situation in these months seems to be a case of the ability of the bull party to take and merchandise the cotton, and the great experience of Mr. Patten in merchandising grain will be a great help in the merchandising of the cotton, but the question of the success of the deal or a squeeze will depend very largely on the demand for the actual cotton as the season advances. Of course, the actual success of the squeeze will depend largely on the size of the short interest, and the ability of the big shorts to bring cotton here for delivery, but there is always the spot stuff to dispose of afterward, and whether the squeeze is financially successful or not depends on the success in disposing of the stuff which is to be taken in on contracts.

The demand for cotton is very quiet. This is reflected in the small production at Fall River and the slow trade reported in all lines of goods. Short time is very general in all centres and the trade is now trying to make up its mind whether this short time is sufficient to bring the total consumption of the year into the actual supplies for the year. The demand for goods is not large, and the goods situation was shown to a certain extent by the reduction in prices for leading lines of cotton goods the past week in order to stimulate business. The revision of domestic prices by H. B. Claflin & Co. was a surprise to the trade. Whether the reduction will result in increased

The spinners' takings of American cotton for the week were 179,614 bales, against 250,939 bales last year, and the world's takings of American cottons this season have been 7,701,681 bales, against 9,010,870 bales last year. After this time last year the takings of American cotton were 4,100,000 bales. If the takings for the balance of the season should be of equal amount, it would give a grand total of 11,800,000 bales, but if the takings are decreased in proportion to the takings for the first six and three-quarter months of the season, it would make a total reduction in spinners' takings of nearly 2,500,000 bales from last year. The estimate of the crop this year, recently made by the National Ginners' Association, place the total at 10,031,000 bales, not including linters, which are estimated at 255,000 bales, plus any excess in new crop movement during August over the new crop movement of last Summer.

The European consumption of cotton was reported the same during February by Ellison as during January. The current consumption is now 170,000 bales a week, against 190,000 last year. Spinners' stocks are reported at about 1,749,000, bales against 2,210,000 bales last year.

Weather conditions for the new crop have generally been very favorable, and good progress has been made throughout the entire South in field work. There has been a little precipitation in Texas, but no general rainfall is reported. There is still a great deal of uneasiness over the Texas situation.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.

By no possible stretch of the imagination can the advance made on Thursday last in the minimum discount of the Bank of England be assigned to our own financial situation. It is a satisfaction to be able to emphasize this fact because for five years past every rise in the English discount has been promptly attributed by English financial writers to alleged misdoings of the United States. Stock market speculation, overproduction of securities, unskilled handling of financial problems, these and many other matters have been urged against us from time to time in connection with the raising of the Bank rate, and we have been pictured as willfully or ignorantly throwing finance and business in Great Britain, and even on the Continent, into chaos through our mad acts. The tables are rather neatly turned in the present instance, for where in our own financial situation a week ago we had to consider and appraise only the forthcoming decisions of the Supreme Court in the anti-trust cases now before it, labor disturbances and the crops, a fourth factor has been added in the unsettled money market, due directly to the abrupt rise in the English Bank discount. Already borrowers on commercial paper who compose the bulk of our manufacturing and mercantile interests are feeling the effects of this sudden change in the London money position. Time money quotations have hardened for all maturities, and the foreign exchanges have been so far turned about that direct gold exports to London are altogether probable. This time, therefore, we have been the ones to feel the effects of the Bank's act, and it is a fair question whether we have not as much reason to complain of the causes which led to that act as London has had in all save a very few of its numerous outbursts of accusation.

We might, if we were so disposed, point accusingly to the tremendous speculation which has long been under way in the English capital in rubber shares. Company after company has been created for the ostensible purpose of planting in remote parts of the world rubber trees which cannot produce income for many years, but for the real purpose of luring from the pockets of unwary investors as much money as possible. Millions upon millions of dollars have been called up for the capitalization of these concerns in a mad gamble, which for its utter abandonment of standards of value reminds the disinterested observer of nothing in the world so much as the South Sea speculation, which also had its home in London. All this occurs at the very moment when South America, India, Egypt, and the Continent are pressing upon the Bank of England ceaseless demands for gold, and when the present English Government, apprehensive of its tenure of power, and therefore driven to discreditable political and financial expedients, approaches the Bank day after day for great sums of money which it might by right have collected as taxes had it possessed the courage to do so, or at least demanded as a part of a carefully thought out fiscal programme. How far the Government has been from entertaining such a programme may be discovered in the following excerpt from a London cable appearing in Wall Street at the week's end:

> It is estimated that the Government will be some £35,000,000 short in revenue by the end of the month, through difficulty in collecting. No less than £21,000,000 in unnecessary borrowings has taken place, and altogether some £45,000,000 is outstanding in floating debts. Add to this £21,000,000 necessary to pay off the war loan on April 5 and the further shortage before the end of the month. This means absorbing the market supplies of money, diverting capital from investment markets, depressing the Stock Exchange and killing business. Neither the money market nor the Stock Exchange is happy about the outlook, for the financial prospects are gloomy, and before the two budgets—this year's and last year's—are forced through temporary borrowings may be well in excess of £100,000,000.

It now appears that $105,000,000 of 3 per cent. five-year treasury notes are to be offered to the British public at 99½ per cent., subscriptions to close on Wednesday of this week. Possibly the successful flotation of this offering will mark the end of the acute stage of the financial muddle of the Government, so that within a reasonable time thereafter we may look for one more change in the discount rate of the Bank of England, making in all six rates instituted by that somewhat perplexed institution since the opening of the present year.

Our unfavorable trade balance, the thoroughly unsatisfactory position of which was brought to the fore again by the publication last week of figures for our foreign trade in February, has rendered our money market peculiarly sensitive to such developments as that in London last week. In February imports exceeded exports by $4,368,000, while for the eight months of the present fiscal year the balance in our favor on our foreign business is only $189,000,000, where at this time a year ago it was $341,000,000, and in 1908 $515,000,000. It is, to say the least, unfortunate from a purely business point of view that at a moment when the tendency of trade is so adverse we should be engaged in a serious tariff dispute with such a good customer as Canada. It is just possible, although in the absence of the detailed figures of our trade for February the statement cannot be definitely made, that expectations in France and Canada of an unfavorable outcome to the tariff disputes may have had the effect of forcing importations heavier than are customary in February and thus producing the unfavorable showing of the month. In its larger sense this loss of $152,000,000 in the trade balance for the past eight months means that our credits abroad have been reduced by that amount, and while to a considerable extent we have made up for the deficiency by the recent substantial sales of new securities to foreign investors and investment institutions, yet that is after all a temporary help, much like the giving of a note in payment of a debt, and leaves us exposed to a foreign demand for payment in gold. Unless the English situation clears quickly exports of the metal are altogether likely. The alternative is a very much higher range of quotations for money here.

It is possible to take some comfort in the firmer money markets if they are regarded as reflecting in part also the continued demand of trade for funds. If we had experienced the decline in business which was so freely predicted in Wall Street so short a time ago as six weeks exports of gold might have been faced with equanimity, for money markets, eased by lessening demands for the accommodation of the business world, might have responded with facility to Europe's call. That they cannot do so now proves, therefore, that business is everywhere very active. Other signs of this activity are found in the heavy earnings maintained by the railroads, the quest of these same roads for new equipment and construction material, the full volume of orders coming to the steel makers, and in a general way the record-breaking bank clearings. The threatened interruption to this tide in the form of general strikes by employes of the railroads has been bridged over at least by the appeal to arbitration, with excellent prospects of a settlement of the difficulties. So far as the crops are concerned the scare over Winter wheat has already been proved groundless. The plant is developing as well as it ever does in this period of the year, while conditions for the seeding of other crops are in all sections satisfactory, thanks to the blanket of snow spread over the country through the Winter.

THE MARKETS OF EUROPE.

NO DEPRESSION IN LONDON.

Increase in Bank Rate Due to Natural, Not Political, Causes.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 20.—The advance of the Bank of England rate at a period of the year when reductions are usually in order was the chief feature of the week. Unionist politicians ascribe it to the chaos created by the Government, but all fair-minded financial authorities agree that there was a natural basis for the increase in the record trade of India, the continued speculation, and the remarkable growth of business confidence.

The Economist thinks there is "a prospect of gold exports from New York as the result of the unfavorable balance of trade, which is exciting much comment among students of American conditions."

NO STRINGENCY IN PARIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, March 20.—The slight money stringency in other financial markets last week was not reflected in that of Paris. There was great activity among investment buyers and prices were firm throughout.

Copper stocks were quiet. Rio Tintos rose from 1935 to 1954, and South African gold mines showed the same general disposition.

Reports from Various Industrial Quarters Are Discouraging.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 20.—The Boerse has suffered another week of inactivity. Discouraging reports from various industrial quarters were mainly responsible. The depression was aggravated by surprise at the action of the Bank of England's raising its discount rate.

The market now expects that quarterly settlement money will be dear, and realizations are already taking place as a precautionary measure.

North German Lloyd shares were weak on the suspicion that 1910 also is destined to pass without the declaration of a dividend. American rates ruled comparatively firm.

BRISK AND CHEERY IN THE STEEL TRADE

ADDING TO EQUIPMENT

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 20.—Pig iron was the weakest spot in the iron and steel trade in Pittsburg at the end of the week. While the rejuvenation of the market in both crude and finished steel is almost complete, furnace stocks of raw iron still go a-begging. Total sales in this district for the week were the lowest since the early days of February, but heavy inquiries are pending in basic and foundry grades, brought out by the new low price levels touched in recent sales for forward delivery. Consumers are beginning to believe that now is the time to buy iron for the second half of the year.

With finished product prices pretty generally restored and a heavy demand for semi-finished steel, Pittsburg district forces have now concentrated in an effort to steady the raw materials, coke, and pig iron. Additional tonnages of Bessemer iron are to be taken by several prominent steel interests—the Republic Iron and Steel and other independents having practically agreed to "go along" in this movement. Producers admit it will take some time to work off the accumulated stocks. In the foundry grades of iron there are already indications of an increased demand in April. Pig iron as a whole will respond more easily than coke, it is believed, for the Connellsville district still is selling spot furnace coke at $2.10, and consumers are refusing to consider quotations of over $2.25 for second-half contracts.

The Steel Corporation is displaying its confidence in the situation by the rushing of preparations for carrying out its 1910 programme of new work at Gary, Ind. Contracts for the concrete foundation work and a part of the equipment for the new fifty-mill sheet plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company at Gary were let during the week. The specifications for the structural tonnage involved in the new mills are already in the hands of the American Bridge Company, and work on the steel is under way at the bridge company's Pittsburg shops. Machinery concerns also submitted bids during the week on the equipment for the projected structural plant of the American Bridge Company at Gary, for which ground was broken three weeks ago. A part of the structural tonnage for this new work already is fabricated and on the ground. It involved about 12,000 tons of steel. Both these new plants at Gary will be well under way by the 1st of May.

The last of the new open-hearth steel capacity of the Carnegie Company at its Homestead plant also was put into operation, making the Homestead plant's total equipment sixty-four open hearths—the largest single installation of open-hearth capacity in the world, aside from the Krupp installation in Germany. This will bring the Homestead plant up to the same efficient tonnage capacity in open-hearth steel that it formerly had in the Bessemer. The Steel Corporation's next large installation of open-hearth capacity will be at the Lorain (Ohio) tube works, and, it is understood, the projected open-hearth plant and merchant mills of the Carnegie Company at Girard, Ohio, must wait for the Lorain improvement. The projected enlargements of the wheel and axle capacity of the Carnegie Company at its Pittsburg plants have taken definite shape, the company having taken over a site of eighty acres adjoining the Schoen Wheel Works (a Carnegie subsidiary) on which to make the extensions.

The new business in steel lines which reached the Pittsburg district mills last week was strongest in merchant mill products and in steel plates. A scarcity of merchant bars developed, which is even more stringent than the shortage the trade experienced during the last weeks of 1909. Chicago consumers have drawn large tonnages of merchant mill products out of the Pittsburg district, and with heavy specifying by the railroads on running contracts and a new demand from the smaller mills the local market suddenly developed a sold-up condition. Mills have taken on all the tonnage they can comfortably carry for the first half of the year. The situation was rendered tighter by automobile interests exceeding their contracts on specifications for the first quarter. Premiums will rule in merchant mill products by the opening of April.

The plate market experienced a revival, due as much to the increased demands of small users as to the more spectacular lettings, such as the 14,000-ton order for the Portland (Ore.) conduit work, which comes to the Carnegie Company; the 3,000-ton requisition from the Lehigh Valley for cars to be built in its own shops, and the 2,500-ton specifications for the new Pennsylvania Railroad car floats, which are to be filled by the Carnegie Company. The largest order of the year in steel plates probably will be let within thirty days—the Government's contract for 40,000 tons for the Panama Canal work. Dock work in the Northwest is consuming additional plates, the most important letting pending being for the Pittsburg Coal Company's docks at Duluth, Minn., to have an annual capacity of 2,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, on which $500,000 is to be expended this year in construction and equipment.

As an instance of the short supply of crude billets and bars, even in staple sizes and grades, one Pittsburg consumer last week contracted for 1,000 tons of Bessemer tin bars for forward delivery at $29.50, delivered, which is 50 cents above the present price. This contract runs into the third quarter, and up to this time producers have been loath to contract past July 1 on sheet or tin bars.

Open-hearth sheet bars for near-by delivery commanded as high as $29.85, Pittsburg, on one sale of 200 tons. Open-hearth billets for any delivery were quoted at the close of the week at $29.50, Pittsburg mills, for standards, while for small billets $30.50 and $31 were paid.

Although large contracts in structural lines are coming out rather slowly, the price shading in structural materials has about disappeared, and small lettings, heretofore held up because of weather conditions, call for substantial tonnages. The railroads in the West already have let more new bridge work for 1910 than they contracted for during the two years of 1908-09, according to estimates of local fabricating companies. The largest structural enterprise of the year in this section, the Pittsburg & Lake Erie bridge at Beaver, Penn., which took 18,000 tons of steel, will be completed and ready for traffic this week. Wire prices still are sagging, though producers report a great amount of rural business coming out of the West, including much fence and barb wire. It is asserted that stocks of dealers all over the West are low, having been allowed to run down during the long Winter. The sheet trade finds an improving demand for the roofing and outdoor work specialties, and the price situation is firming up, though galvanized corrugated sheets still are quoted by two independent producers at $1 off the regular market.

Tubular products for manufacturing purposes are in better demand than they were early in the year, boiler tubing having become active within the past fortnight; but merchant pipe orders are far below normal. Several large pipe line enterprises in the Southwest also are being held up, partly on account of fear of unfavorable legislation. The result is some indecision on the part of pipe manufacturers, particularly in view of the fact that two strong independent producers that have not heretofore been a factor in the pipe trade, the Cambria Steel Company and the Republic Iron and Steel, are to invade the field during the present year. The Republic's new mills will begin making merchant pipe within ten days.

Members of the Wrought Pipe Jobbers' Association, in annual convention here during the week, brought gloomy reports as to the pipe situation in the East, but predicted a large year in the West. They called attention to the fact that the cast-iron pipe lettings in Chicago territory and beyond were the largest this year in the history of that section, and drew the conclusion that the market for the smaller sizes of pipe must follow the laying of the main lines.

Aside from the sale of 2,000 tons of basic for near-by delivery, the local iron market was devoid of interest. Inquiries for foundry iron now in the market total 15,000 tons, a large part of it for second half shipment. In basic the buying early in the month relieved the pressure of stocks somewhat, but the situation in both grades of steel-making iron—will be far from satisfactory until the mills begin making larger requisitions than they have made during the quarter now closing.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 19.—Interest in the new Lake Superior properties continues unabated and the market for the shares is excited. All are listening to hear North Lake's No. 7 drill strike the second Adventure lode and for a strike in the Indiana property. Meanwhile new flotations are coming forward and the search for copper in virgin territory goes on.

Ojibway is hoisting rock containing good copper values from both the 500 and 650 foot levels of No. 2 shaft. La Salle, after three years, has resumed production. Mohawk's drifting operations expose a superior quality of rock about No. 6 shaft. Very encouraging showing is reported from the Trimountain mine of Copper Range in drifts off No. 2 shaft. Boston and Corbin reports peacock ore on the 700-foot level of the Bertha vein that assays 40 per cent. copper and is heavily charged with silver.

The crosscut from the Emma shaft of Ely Central shows the width of the new vein to be at least 200 feet and assaying 5 to 15 per cent. copper. The company has about finished retimbering the Eureka shaft and is unwatering the Clipper shaft. Great activity is reported from the North Butte property in development and exploration. A winze is being sunk on the Edith May vein from the 2,200-foot level, and it is said that the vein will be drifted at each 100 feet to determine the value at the earliest possible moment. Butte Coalition, it is said, may reopen the Corra mine, inasmuch as the vein, in Anaconda territory, has developed great richness.

Directors of Ray Consolidated are considering enlarging the concentrator so as to produce, roughly speaking, 100,000,000 pounds of copper yearly at an estimated cost of 8½ cents per pound. Chino's February report shows 16,781,278 tons of developed and partially developed ore, averaging 2.61 per cent. copper. Daly-West reports 125,000 tons of mill ore blocked out. Granby is now producing 30,000,000 pounds of copper annually at a cost of 9½ cents. President Rice of Superior and Boston has advices that the west drift winze in the Gardiner shaft is in 8½ per cent. ore.

Old Dominion has been opening its rich sulphide ore bodies on the sixteenth level, but is unable to increase production until the completion of the new hoist. According to reports from Corbin, Mon., the Alta mine has found an eight-foot vein which shows as high as 8 per cent. copper and is believed to be an extension of the Bertha.

New Orleans, March 11, 1910.

The Board of Liquidation, City Debt, acting under authority of Act No. 19 of the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana for the session of 1906 and Act No. 116 of said General Assembly for the session of 1908, both of which said acts have been ratified by Constitutional Amendments and have become part of the Constitution of the State of Louisiana, will receive sealed proposals at its office in the City of New Orleans, Louisiana, up to twelve o'clock noon on Tuesday, April 12th, 1910, for the purchase of seven million dollars in face value of the new public improvement bonds of the City of New Orleans, authorized by and to be issued under the provisions of the acts aforementioned and the Constitutional Amendments ratifying same.

Said bonds are of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and bear interest at the rate of four per cent. They are by law exempt from taxation, State, parish and municipal.

Said bonds are payable January 1st, 1942, and are subject to call at the option of the City of New Orleans after January 1st, 1928, and will be issued under and subject to the acts aforementioned, which are referred to and made part hereof for greater certainty and particularity. Said proposals shall be received under and subject to the following conditions, to wit:

1st. No sale shall be made of any of the said bonds unless the aggregate of the bid or bids shall be for the full amount of said bonds, to wit, $7,000,000 in face value.

2d. Said bonds will be adjudicated to the highest bidder or bidders, provided that said bonds or any part thereof, shall not be adjudicated for less than par and accrued interest, less a commission not to exceed [illegible] per centum on the principal thereof.

3d. All matured interest coupons on said bonds shall be cut from said bonds and cancelled, and the successful bidder or bidders shall pay the interest which may have accrued on said bonds up to the date of delivery.

4th. Said bonds shall be paid for by the successful bidder or bidders in cash as fast as they can be signed and delivered, said deliveries to be made on twenty-four hours' notice.

All bonds to be delivered within a period not to exceed ninety days from date of final acceptance of bid.

No bid will be received or considered unless accompanied by a certified check on some chartered bank in the City of New Orleans for three per cent. of the amount of each bid, the check or checks of the successful bidder or bidders shall be cashed and the proceeds retained by the Board of Liquidation as a guarantee that the said bidder or bidders will comply with his or their bids, and said proceeds shall be applied to the payment of the bonds last delivered to said bidder or bidders respectively. In case of neglect or refusal to comply with any bid the proceeds of said bidder's check shall be forfeited to the Sewerage and Water Board.

TO THE HOLDERS OF
First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds:

The Republic Iron & Steel Company has authorized an issue of $25,000,000 10-30 Year Five Per Cent. Sinking Fund Mortgage Gold Bonds, whereof $15,000,000 bonds are reserved for future issue subject to the restrictions set forth in the Mortgage, and bonds up to $10,000,000 are now to be issued for the purpose of taking up its First Mortgage Bonds, which this Company has agreed to call for payment on October 1, 1914, and for other corporate purposes. On or before October 1, 1914, the new Mortgage will therefore become a First Mortgage on all of the property of the Company.

The earnings of the Company for the past four and one-half years have averaged nearly six times the amount of the annual interest on the $10,000,000 bonds; at no time within these years have they amounted to less than four times the amount of said interest. The total value of our mineral reserves, fixed assets and quick assets is estimated at over $78,000,000, or nearly eight times the amount of our present bond issue.

The bonds carry a minimum Sinking Fund, payable in cash or bonds at par, of 2½ per cent. per annum on $10,000,000 bonds and on all further bonds issued; to be increased whenever annual extraction of minerals exceeds amount specified in mortgage.

The Republic Iron & Steel Company hereby offers to the holders of its First Mortgage Bonds to purchase their bonds at 105 and accrued interest in cash, and has also arranged with Messrs. Hallgarten & Co. and J. & W. Seligman & Co., that such bondholders as may desire to do so, shall have the privilege of taking in exchange the new bonds par for par and cash for the premium.

This offer may be withdrawn at any time without notice.

The coupons due April 1, 1910, of the First Mortgage 5% Bonds will be paid at the office of Hallgarten & Co., 5 Nassau Street, New York.

REPUBLIC IRON & STEEL COMPANY,
By JNO. A. TOPPING, Chairman.

New York, March 18, 1910.

Referring to the above notice of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, the undersigned give notice that they are prepared to receive Republic Iron & Steel Company First Mortgage Five Per Cent. Bonds (ex. April 1, 1910, coupon), and to deliver in exchange therefor, par for par, new 10-30 Year Five Per Cent. Sinking Fund Mortgage Gold Bonds (bearing October 1, 1910, and subsequent coupons), together with $50 in cash in respect of each $1,000 bond so delivered; they will at the same time cash the April 1, 1910, coupon.

Copies of a letter of the Chairman of the Company, giving full information in regard to the above issue of bonds, may be had on application.

We recommend these bonds as a safe and conservative investment.

This offer may be withdrawn at any time without notice.

Bankers Trust Company, New York, Trustee

The Rogers-Brown Iron Company is controlled by Messrs. Rogers, Brown & Company, who are well known as the leading dealers in pig iron in this country. From a letter signed by Mr. William A. Rogers, President of the Company, to which we refer for a full description of the bonds, we summarize as follows:

1. Serial Maturity: The entire issue is due in serial instalments at 102½ and interest, $161,000 maturing annually from January 1, 1913, to January 1, 1932, inclusive, $160,000 annually from January 1, 1933, to January 1, 1940, inclusive.
2. Purpose of Issue: Proceeds of these bonds will be used for the construction of two additional blast furnaces at Buffalo, New York, doubling the present capacity, and for stripping upwards of 20,000,000 tons of iron ore in the Mesabi Range, Minnesota.
3. Value of Property: Total assets valued at $16,480,000; funded debt, including this issue, $8,700,000; lease of ore lands in Mesabi Range is alone valued in excess of funded debt.
4. Earnings: Net earnings have amounted to about three times average interest charges for the past four years, and to more than four times interest charges during the current fiscal year. Including interest upon the new issue, present earnings are more than double interest charges, and should be 3½ times amount required when enlarged plant is in full operation.
5. Control of Raw Materials: The Company controls its own supply of coke and upwards of 30,000,000 tons of iron ore, estimated to be ample for 30 years' operation.
6. Sinking Fund. 25 cents per ton of ore mined from Mesabi property. Surplus payments to sinking fund above minimum requirements to meet serial instalments must be used to retire these bonds at 102½ and interest by lot. It is anticipated that substantial amounts of the bonds will be retired by lot in this way.

Maturities to 1925 - prices to yield 5.50%
Subsequent maturities to yield 5.30% to 5.47%

Legality of the issue approved by our counsel, Messrs. Cravath, Henderson & de Gersdorff. Ore properties examined by William A. Griffith, Esq., Mining Engineer and Geologist, Scranton, Pa. Interim certificates of the company will be delivered pending delivery of engraved bonds.

Copies of detailed plans or drawings may be obtained from the State Engineer and Surveyor at Albany, N. Y., upon payment to him of the cost of producing them.

Monthly estimates will be paid of ninety per centum (90 per cent.) of the work done at the contract price. Every proposal for said work must be accompanied by a money deposit in the form of a draft or certified check upon some good banking institution in the City of Albany or New York, issued by a National or State bank in good credit within the State and payable at sight to the Superintendent of Public Works for five per centum (5 per cent.) of the amount of the proposal.

Upon the execution of the contract and approval of bonds, the certified check or draft will be returned to the proposer unless the same shall have been presented for collection prior to such time, in which case the amount of the deposit will be refunded by the Superintendent of Public Works.

The deposits of bidders other than the one to whom the award of contract shall be made will be returned immediately after the award has been made.

Each proposal must be addressed to the Superintendent of Public Works, Albany, N. Y., and must be endorsed on the envelope with the name of the construction for which the proposal is made.

Award, if made, will be made to the person or persons whose proposal shall be lowest in cost to the State for doing the work, and which shall comply with all provisions required to render it formal. Before any award shall be made the lowest bidder will be required to satisfy the Superintendent of Public Works of his ability to provide suitable equipment and materials for the proper performance of the work.

The right is reserved to reject all proposals and readvertise and award the contract in the regular manner if, in the judgment of the undersigned, the interests of the State will be enhanced thereby.

CONDENSED ENERGY REACHES ITS LIMIT

MARVELS OF RADIOACT..ITY

A few days after the announcement was made at the Paris Academy of Sciences that polonium had been isolated from radium Sir William Ramsay, who has discovered half a dozen or more elements, was entertained at the Authors' Club in London. Replying to the toast in his honor, proposed by Mr. Rider Haggard, Sir William spoke of radioactivity, radium, and polonium. He mentioned, of course, Mme. Curie and her great triumph in isolating polonium. It will be remembered that she and her husband, the late Prof. Curie, discovered radium.

Scientists speak of polonium almost with awe. It is about 5,000 times more rare than radium. It decomposes organic and inorganic substances with amazing rapidity. It loses weight and disappears in a short time, half of it disappearing in 140 days, while radium takes 1,000 years or more for its complete transformation. The London correspondent of The Medical Record writes as follows about the dinner to Sir William Ramsay and what was said there:

"He [Sir William] said radioactivity was a new word. In fact, the French Academy had not yet decided on its gender, though it had decided that automobile was masculine. Prof. Rutherford and another scientist supposed radium changed entirely into different products, emitting during its decomposition alpha particles. The change seemed to be into a gas or mysterious exhalation, called by Rutherford the 'emanation.' Here, then, was radium doing continually what the alchemists tried to do, changing the elements.

Will Last Forever.

"How long would radium last if it were always changing? Practically forever. It looks a paradox, but is not. We can tell how long it will take radium to half change into the emanations. We have just measured the time in our laboratory. It is 1,750 years. It could be squeezed into a tube finer than that of any thermometer. It was the most concentrated form of energy known, and its emanations went on changing into other things, to each of which, as it became known, a name was given. There was Radium A, which lived for a quarter of an hour, and then changed to Radium B., which in its turn lived three-quarters of an hour. Radium C lived for half an hour. In two or three hours all these substances had been produced and disappeared. Then came a fairly longlived substance, namely, Radium D, which was half gone in forty years, giving one time to look at it, and it was a leadlike substance with a metallic lustre.

Many Varieties of Radium.

"There there was Radium E1 and E2, and Radium F, which was probably identical with the polonium discovered by Mme. Curie in pitchblende. Scientists now possessed the greatest concentrated energy known, said Sir William, and he doubted if they would ever get a greater. But scientists were always in doubt, and he doubted his own assertions. The alpha rays shot out at a rate of between 15,000 and 40,000 miles a second and carried energy, but they had to be caught. Up to the present," he went on, "it has been said radium cures cancer. I do not think it by any means certain. I think it exceedingly doubtful. But it has not been properly tried, and all we can say is that there have been things done which are favorable to that suggestion.

"But although we may postpone decision with regard to cancer, there can be no postponement as to rodent ulcer. It is a certain cure for that. There has not been a single case of failure, except when the disease had spread to an awful extent before treatment was begun."

TALKS SUFFRAGE AT CONCERT

There was a line of automobiles drawn up outside Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's Suffrage Settlement House, 84 East 111th Street, last evening and the sound of classical music came from within. After 8 o'clock, the hour for the concert to begin, every seat was taken by the club members of the neighborhood who are affiliated with the work of the house.

Three of the soloists were personal friends of Mrs. Belmont, two singers and a violinist, and their identity has been kept secret.

"If we should tell that they would never come again," said Miss Nettie Podell, Superintendent of the house.

There was one name they would give at the house, because they are proud of it, that of the pianist, who gave delightful solos, playing without notes. He is Hyman Rovinsky. Hyman is in size a very small boy, with a clever face, a prodigy, but he is 14 years old, a freshman of De Witt Clinton High School and a pupil of Stojowski.

Woman suffrage has not yet been put into classical music, and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw was at the meeting last night to give the "Votes for Women" note. She told a story of the "Burden of the Ballot." It was a tale of a somewhat stalwart person who hailed originally from Erin's isle, and in America washed clothes for a livelihood, and incidentally in the Winter, because it came her way, did a little snow shoveling. In a Votes for Women State she was in due time prepared to cast a ballot. A kindly politician volunteered to give her advice and information. Bridget refused.

"You have never," she said, speaking in the picturesque accent of her native land, "offered to give me a lift when I was scrubbing clothes; you have never offered to help me when I was shoveling snow, and I think I can manage a little piece of paper myself." This was one of a series of educational concerts. Mrs. Belmont presided.

EARLY AMERICAN WORKS.

An item, interestingly associated with Daniel Webster is in a collection of books to be sold at Merwin-Clayton's on March 24. It is a copy of John Sanderson's Biography of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, 8vo, Philadelphia, 1820, with Webster's book plate.

An extremely rare and curious satire upon Pennsylvania politics of the period is entitled "The Algerine Spy in Pennsylvania; or, Letters Written by a Native of Algiers on the Affairs of the U. S. in America from the Close of the Year 1783 to the Meeting of the Convention," 12mo, Philadelphia, 1787. No copy of this rarity was in the notable library of former Gov. Pennypacker of Pennsylvania.

An interesting item is "The Flying Cloud. A Romance of New York Bay. By Prof. J. H. Ingraham." After his ordination as a clergyman the author suppressed this and others of his earlier works. One of the rarest and most valuable books in the collection is a copy of Haywood's "Civil and Political History of the State of Tennessee from Its Earliest Settlement Up to the Year 1796," 8vo, original calf, rebacked, Knoxville, 1823. This is one of the most important of the early works on the Indians.

Will Lecture on "The Heroines of Shakespeare" in a Ten Weeks' Tour.

Formal announcement was made last night through representatives of the Civic Forum that Ellen Terry has arranged to come to America this year to deliver a series of lectures. Her signature was affixed to a contract a week ago in the offices of the London agent of the Civic Forum Lecture Bureau, which will manage her tour, and the contract was received in New York Saturday.

Miss Terry has chosen for her subject, "The Heroines of Shakespeare," in which she will outline all of the principal women characters in Shakespeare's plays, illustrating her talk with readings from the famous speeches. In her long career on the stage, as leading woman and co-star with Sir Henry Irving, and later by herself, she has portrayed nearly every important feminine rôle in Shakespeare.

The exact date of Miss Terry's lectures has not been set yet, although her contract calls for her appearance here between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15 of this year. She will devote at least ten consecutive weeks to her tour, and will have an option of extending the course for ten more weeks. Her engagements in London require her return to England by the 1st of March, 1911.

All of the principal cities and several of the smaller ones will be visited on her American tour, but she will speak only once in New York, either at Carnegie Hall or The New Theatre, making this city the starting point of the tour.

For the last year or two Miss Terry practically has been out of active theatrical life in England. Some time ago she made a tour of the provinces in a répertoire of Shakespearean and other plays, and she has appeared in some revivals in London. Her last appearance in New York was at the Empire Theatre, in 1907, when she presented Shaw's "Captain Brassbound's Conversion," "The Good Hope," and "Nance Oldfield." After her New York engagement she made a short tour of the country.

CHEROKEE SEMINARY BURNED

MUSKOGEE, Okla., March 20.—Fire today destroyed the main building of the Cherokee Seminary at Tahlequah, one of the oldest institutions of the Cherokee Nation. The personal effects of the 200 Indian students were lost. The damage to the building is estimated at $75,000.

The seminary was built in 1856 by Cherokee Indians, who hauled the material for its construction more than seventy-five miles overland.

The top figure at the sale last Thursday at Merwin-Clayton's of Part I. of the library of Edward Everett Hale was $490, paid for a copy of the privately printed issue of James Russell Lowell's "Ode Recited at the Commemoration of the Living and Dead Soldiers of Harvard University, July 21, 1865." Inscribed on the fly leaf is "E. E. Hale, with the sincere regards of J. R. Lowell, 3d Septr., 1865." Only fifty copies of this issue were printed at Cambridge in 1865 for presentation to the author's friends.

A first edition of the privately printed poems of Marie Lowell, edited by J. R. Lowell, sold for $40. It has Dr. Hale's autograph signature on the fly leaf. A rare broadside "To All True Southern Men—Shall Kansas Be Surrendered to the Abolitionists?" folio, dated June 12, 1856, brought $20. First editions of the eight parts of Robert Browning's "Bells and Pomegranates" realized $61. A copy of St. Augustine's "De Civitate Dei," printed on the famous Strassburg press of Johann Menthelin between the years 1466 and 1468, sold for $77.

A copy of the privately printed "Eugene Field to Francis Wilson: Some Attentions," 12mo, New Rochelle, 1896, realized $10.25. A first edition of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Famous Old People" went for $19, and a first edition of his "Grandfather's Chair" for $15.

A first edition of "The Iron Gate and Other Poems," with inscription on fly leaf "Edward Everett Hale, with the kind regards of Oliver Wendell Holmes," sold for $8.75. James Russell Lowell's copy of "The Dramatic Works of Shakespeare," four volumes of a set of eight, containing Lowell's autograph signature in five places and his initials, J. R. L., in four places, brought $48. It is presumed that this work formed part of his library while he was a student at Harvard.

In 1840 he presented the work to Nathan Hale, Jr., who was editor of the shortlived Boston Miscellany, to which Lowell contributed articles, among them his essays on the old English dramatists.

A curious old New England work, entitled "Smoking Flax Inflamed; or, Weary Sinners Encouraged to Go to Christ from the Certainty and Eternity of Their Happiness. By Samuel Mordey, Pastor of the Church of Christ in York, in Maine, N. E.," 12mo, printed by B. Green for Samuel Gerrish, Boston, 1718, brought $7.

G. P. R. JAMES'S VIEW OF US.

The friendly opinion of this country entertained by G. P. R. James, the English novelist, in strong contrast to that of Charles Dickens, is shown in a letter of the former, sold at Anderson's last week. It is dated New Haven, Conn., Oct. 27, 1850, and addressed to a friend. James at the time was delivering lectures at Yale. He writes:

> In passing through this land, one sees no poverty, no squalid wretchedness, no hovels and old huts. Great good humor, too, is visible everywhere amongst the people; each man seems to feel that by industry he can get on as well as another. There is little of that jealous rivalry, none of that irritable envy that we see in older lands, where we are all struggling for a portion of that bread, which is not sufficient for the whole.
> There is undoubtedly an eager craving for money. It is not only the whole land that is making its way up, but every individual in it. Each man is encouraged by a probable hope of fortune, and each man seeks it with eagerness, but every one holds out his hand to the one lower than himself on the ladder and tries to help him up too.
>
> The things I mention are on the surface—open to every eye. * * * Doubtless there is much that I object to, but, depend upon it, this is a great and extraordinary country, and England must not sit still contented if she would not be pushed from her stool.

James further showed his appreciation of Americans by marrying a native of this country. He died in 1860. His widow died in the United States in 1891.

The following amusing and characteristic letter of Henry Ward Beecher, Brooklyn, dated May 9, 1872, was addressed to the Redpath Lecture Bureau:

> I thank you for your courtesy in sending me, in advance, material you propose to insert in the L. M. But as I want to stand absolutely blank till Autumn, I had much rather you should leave me unnamed. * * * Whatever few lectures I may wish to deliver I can always pick up after November, and I had therefore rather do, as I always have done, enjoy, from April till October, a liberty as absolute as if I was an Indian in Oregon. * * * So you will do me a kindness and yourselves, I am sure, no harm, if you will note that H. W. B. has no existence—is only one of the Esop's fables—or one of the Arabian Night tales.

The letter was also sold at Anderson's.

We have had to spend this Winter to relieve pitable distress far more than we are receiving, and need $20,000 to complete the season's work.

The city's charter permits it to relieve people in their homes only in the case of the blind. This throws upon us a welcome but heavy burden, and calls for generous voluntary gifts, which may be sent to R. S. Minturn, Treas., Room 229, No. 105 E. 22d St.

AGAINST AUTO BILLS PENDING IN JERSEY

NORTH JERSEY CLUB ACTS

Enters Vigorous Protest Against Both Frelinghuysen Proposals and Will Remember Their Supporters.

Automobilists from all parts of New Jersey are stirred up over the complex situation resulting from the stand taken by the Legislature of that State on the question of automobiling. The defeat of the Edge bill last week and the introduction of two others, aimed at the automobilists, was the signal to the automobile men for the call to arms.

The Edge bill, which suffered defeat, was to allow motorists registered in other States to tour New Jersey without further formality. The bill was expected to become a law, but it did not meet with the approval of Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, President of the Senate, whose influence was sufficient to beat it.

One of the two bills which subsequently were introduced provides for an increase in the license fees of automobiles, and contains a joker which will do away with the present limited tourist privilege permitting non-resident motorists registered in their home States to tour New Jersey for eight days in any one year upon the payment of $1.

Opposed by Auto Owners.

The second bill allows the State of New Jersey to pay one-half of the cost of the proposed new ocean boulevard, instead of the quarter of the expense of the construction of new roads, which the State usually bears, and also permits the funds in the State Treasury accrued from the licensing of automobiles to be applied to the maintenance of the boulevard, instead of dividing such funds pro rata among the counties.

Both bills, which are favored by Senator Frelinghuysen, are strongly opposed by the automobile interests of the State.

Resolutions attacking both measures have been passed by the leading automobile organizations of the State, the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club of Newark, N. J., which has a membership of more than 2,000; the Associated Automobile Clubs of New Jersey, a federation of the clubs in New Jersey; the Automobile Club of Hudson County, with headquarters in Jersey City, and the North Jersey Automobile Club of Paterson, N. J.

Resolutions Against Bills.

> Whereas, Senate bill No. 215 provides for the diversion of money received for licenses of automobiles to other purposes than those named in the original bill covering licensing of automobiles as adopted in April, 1906, together with certain amendments added in 1909, and
>
>
> Resolved, That the North Jersey Automobile Club in special meeting assembled protest most vigorously against the passage of either or both of these bills and ask that the members and legislators for Passaic County and the State Senator representing this district not only to vote against these bills personally, but to use every honorable endeavor to influence other members of the Senate and Assembly to vote against their passage.

The members of the club also pledged themselves to work against any candidate for public office who votes for either of the two bills or any other bill imposing added taxation on automobiles.

FORT NOT COMMITTED.

Governor Has Five Days to Pass on Jersey Utilities Bill.

The ultimate fate of the Public Utilities bill, passed by both branches of the Legislature in Trenton last week, will be known some time this week. The bill has not yet reached Gov. Fort, who has not been in Trenton since last Wednesday.

Gov. Fort would not discuss the measure at his home in East Orange yesterday, further than to deny that he is "committed to" the bill.

"It would be manifestly unfair and entirely out of place for me even to intimate what my action will be," he said. "I have not yet received the bill. When I get it I shall take such action as I deem proper."

His friends in East Orange think he will veto the bill, as it by no means carries out the pledges of the party as they understand them.

IN NEW JERSEY.

The Newark police and fire authorities are making an investigation of a fire which occurred early yesterday in a tenement at 505 Hunterdon Street, endangering the lives of a dozen families. The fire is believed to have been of incendiary origin.

Supt. Thomas O'Leary of the Bijou Dream Theatre of Newark, N. J., reported to the Newark police that $166 was taken from the ticket office late Saturday night. The money was brought to the playhouse early in the day, and was to be used in paying the employes.

A delegation of members of the New Jersey Road Horse Association will go to Trenton to-day to oppose the bill providing for the cutting of streets through the Essex County Speedway near Newark.

Mrs. C. Irving Patterson, returning to her home in Reckless Place, Red Bank, late Saturday night, frightened away thieves who had ransacked every room in the house. They got about $800 of booty.

NOT OLDEST FLOOD RECORD?

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—Following the publication of the announcement by Dr. Herman V. Hilprecht of the Department of Archeology of the University of Pennsylvania that he had found among the tablets from the Temple Library at Nippur a fragment containing what he regarded as the oldest extant version of the Babylonian deluge, Dr. Morris Jastrow, professor of the Semitic language and literature at Pennsylvania, has expressed himself somewhat skeptically as to the importance of the find.

"I have not seen the full publication on the subject," said Dr. Jastrow to-day, "and therefore must depend on newspaper accounts, which, indeed, appear to be quite full. I should like to correct a misapprehension which seems to be quite general that the new fragment is the oldest version of the Babylonian deluge story known to us. That is not the case.

"Scholars have known for the past twelve years of a fragment now in J. Pierpont Morgan's library which, belonging to the great Babylonian period, has the great advantage of being dated. It was written by a temple pupil in the eleventh year of King Ammizaduka, which would correspond to about 2000 B. C., or, according to other scholars who place the entire Hammulbabi period later, at about 1813 B. C. This has the additional advantage of being a much larger fragment, fifty lines being preserved. In its complete form it contains eight columns, and the fragment is furthermore registered as the second of the series.

"Whether the new fragment belongs to the Hammulbabi period, as has been announced, can only be determined after a careful examination of the character, but it is impossible in the case of undated tablets to say more than that they belong to a certain period, which gives a leeway of several hundred years. The Morgan tablet, therefore, remains as a dated tablet, the oldest known to us. The present one may be just as old, but may also be later.

"This Morgan tablet was found by Prof. Scheil, who read a paper on the subject before the Oriental Congress, held in Paris in 1897, and subsequently published it in a very modest way in the pages of a purely technical journal. Besides, since 1902 scholars have known of a second tablet of the old Babylonian period, in which there is a reference to the hero of the deluge, whose name is specifically mentioned. Through this fragment the reading of the name was in fact more definitely established.

"While, of course, it is interesting to have another fragment, so far as I can see, there are added no new features—to scholars, that is to say—if we remove the bracketed portions furnished to the translation, which are admittedly conjectural restorations.

"To read one word and restore the rest of the line is a procedure which to many scholars will appear somewhat bold. The reference to the roof or the deck of the boat is found in the Assyrian version, and since the words 'the creeping things, two of everything,' are conjectural restorations, they need not be discussed.

"Further details I must leave until I have read the monograph on the subject. When scholars read this monograph they will no doubt have something more to say."

Coney Island had a foretaste of Summer yesterday. The mild weather sent 75,000 people to the seaside, and with the exception of the big parks and hotels, everything was in full swing. Surf Avenue, the Bowery, and other thoroughfares were crowded all day, and far into the night. It was an orderly crowd, however, and the fifty extra policemen who had been sent down had very little to do. There were few arrests.

The crowd got a real Summer thrill when Charles A. Bigney, a professional diver, made a dive from the top of the shoot-the-chutes structure in Dreamland into the ocean, a distance of 150 feet. Bigney did the leap for the benefit of a moving picture man. When he stood on top of the high structure the crowd made such a rush to get to vantage points that for a time it looked as if the gates to the park would be torn down. Manager Samuel Gumpertz avoided trouble by opening the gates and allowing the crowd to swarm over the park. Ten thousand people crowded the piers and applauded when Bigney, in his bathing suit, hurtled through the air. He made a clean dive and was picked up in a row boat by Capt. Tony Toggil of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Station in the park.

The excitement had scarcely subsided when a commotion was raised at the end of the pier. Edmund Schmidtars of 546 Forty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, fell asleep while fishing and tumbled into the sea. He was pulled out more dead than alive by Murray Hennessy, proprietor of the Hotel Saranac on Henderson's Walk, and Capt. Toggil, who happened to be close by in his boat. When he was brought to he insisted that he had been pulled into the sea by an enormous fish.

Many people have an erroneous impression of a "liquor cure." They fear a "hospital," with burly attendants, isolation, possible rough handling, and unpleasant notoriety. They find here, instead, comfortable surroundings, trained nursing, expert medical attention, and the same privacy they would have in their own homes. They can, if they wish, keep in constant personal touch with friends or business. A call at our Institute will verify these statements and involve for the inquirer no obligation and no publicity.

BEAT A NEW YORK POLICEMAN

Jersey City Thugs Did Up Dugan and Robbed Him of $52.

John Dugan, a policeman in the Madison Street Station, Manhattan, was found unconscious on the sidewalk at Henderson and Seventh Streets, Jersey City, early yesterday morning. When revived, Dugan said he had been attacked by three men, who, after knocking him down and beating him into unconsciousness, had robbed him of $52.

Dugan, who has been on sick leave, said he had been visiting friends in Jersey City, and was on his way home when set upon by the three men. He was taken to the City Hospital and later in the day went to his home, at 401 Halsey Street, Brooklyn.

Three men were arrested by the Jersey City police soon after Dugan was found, but the injured man said they were not his assailants.

PRIZES FOR BEST AD. COPY.

Omaha Club Preparing for National Advertising Association Meeting.

OMAHA, March 20.—An advertising copy exhibit and contest will be a feature of the next meeting of the Associated Ad Clubs of America, to be held in Omaha July 18, 19, and 20.

To make the work of the associated advertising clubs more effective and the convention more educational, the Omaha Club, which will be host to the meeting, will offer five cash prizes for advertising "copy" and display all entries in a big showroom, giving writers the benefit of showing their work and buyers of copy the opportunity of seeing a display of the brains of men from all parts of the United States. The contest is open to any copy writer in America except members of the Omaha Club.

The five prizes will be offered for the following classes of "copy": One full-page department store advertisement, one half-page exclusive clothing store advertisement, one half-page exclusively dry goods advertisement, one page for magazine advertisement for any manufactured article, and a suitable ad of not less than half a page to run in agricultural papers on a mail order proposition.

The copy will be judged by the five best copy men to be secured, and then the copy will be offered for sale, the proceeds to go to the exhibitors, whether a prize winner or not. The prizes will be substantial. The list of prizes and particulars are being prepared by F. W. Harwood, Secretary of the Omaha Club, who makes the announcement.

The Omaha Club is preparing for a big convention, and has opened headquarters in the Board of Trade Building, advertising the meeting as "In Omaha—out where it is cool."

His Stay in Jail Depends on Victim.

TRENTON, N. J., March 20.—If Frank Arnold is convicted of stealing an overcoat his stay in jail will depend on the man he robbed, Judge Joseph W. Congdon of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

The overcoat was bought in London by Judge Congdon, and he was so proud of it that when it was stolen he notified the police of every city in the United States, with the result that a detective arresed Arnold, wearing the coat, as he was entering a pawnshop in Binghamton.
